Randolph protests W. Shoreline Box

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Hancock County Superintendent of Education Terrell Randolph has filed a 'Petition for Contest of Election' before the Democratic Executive Committee of Hancock County.

The petition by Randolph alleges at least 45 voters who reside in Bay St. Louis Municipal School District voted in the Democratic primary runoff election for county superintendent of education in the West Shoreline Park precinct.

Randolph trailed North Bay Elementary Principal Billy Sills by two votes in the August 28 election.

Upon review by the Democratic Executive Committee, Sills lead was placed at 15 votes.

Attorney Ben F. Galloway of Gulfport represents Randolph in the action which calls for another election for county superintendent of education in the West Shoreline Park Precinct to be held within five days of an Executive Committee determination.

Joseph Benvenuti, Chairman of the Hancock County Democratic Executive Committee, said Tuesday that he would be notifying all parties involved. Wednesday of a meeting to be held Sept. 17 at 6 p.m. in the Hancock County Courthouse.

At that special meeting, Benvenuti said, the Hancock County Executive Committee will have to decide upon what action to take.

Randolph's petition states:

Crash site minus one turn signal

By LESLIE WILLIAMS

Bay St. Louis police Tuesday reported no injuries in a two-car collision at the intersection of North Beach Boulevard and US-90 where the turn-signal unit of the traffic light system was knocked out by Hurricane Frederic last week.

A Ford Fairmont driven by Ruthlayn May of Bay St. Louis, travelling east on US-90, collided with a Plymouth Duster driven by Francis LeMeunier of Longbeach, police report.

The collision occurred when the Duster turned south from the turning lane on US-90 towards North Beach Boulevard, Bay St. Louis policeman Harris Boudreaux explained.

The front of the Fairmont struck the right side of the Duster, Boudreaux stated.

Officer Boudreaux estimated the damage to both cars at approximately $800.

Boudreaux reported no injuries. There should be a left turn signal at the intersection of US-90 and North Beach Boulevard.

Federal officials deny aid for Beach Boulevard repair

By LESLIE WILLIAMS

Hancock County's application for beach road repair funds has been denied by the Federal Highway Administration (FHA), Emory E. Shaw, regional administrator of that agency, revealed this week.

Shaw, FHA administrator for Mississippi, said, "Our Washington office last week turned down Hancock County's request for approximately $100,000 to repair the beach road."

Some 15 miles of county beach road were damaged, first by a tropical storm in April and later by Hurricane Bob in July.

Earlier this week, both Hancock County Beat Two Supervisor Alton Kellar and Woodrow Mathews, field representative for Sen. Thad Cochran, were highly optimistic Hancock would receive federal funding for the beach road project.

Kellar said Monday he expected the county's congressional district to announce "real soon" that federal funds for the beach road had been acquired. The county has received $3,307 from the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration to repair beach road from Clermont Harbor to Bayou Cadet, which is outside the cities of Waveland and Bay St. Louis.

"As far as I know," Shaw explained from his Jackson office Tuesday, "no other state or federal funds are available."

However, the administrator stated BEACH BOULEVARD-Page A8

Pyron challenge handed to courts

By EDGAR PEREZ

The Mississippi Democratic Executive Committee Monday refused to take any further action on incumbent Southern District Highway Commissioner W.H. (Shag) Pyron's challenge of his defeat by Wayneboro Mayor Robert Joiner in the party primary.

Pyron lost by five votes, and filed a lengthy (in excess of 200 legal pages) protest with the party's state committee, challenging the count in specific boxes throughout the counties of the Southern District.

Copies of a Joiner rebuttal of Pyron's challenge have been sent the chairmen of the Democratic Executive Committees in each of the counties in the district, including Hancock County.

Joiner's reply alleges serious irregularities in the Jeff Davis County voting, and refers to mathematical and human errors in the tabulation of nine boxes in Hancock County.

"The ultimate resolution of the Democratic nominee for Southern District highway commissioner will be by judicial review," the state committee said this week in a prepared statement.

Hypertension search

'Squeeze disease' project planned

By LESLIE WILLIAMS

Hancock County Board of Supervisors endorsed project "squeeze disease" at Monday's board meeting. Project squeeze disease will attempt to identify persons in Hancock, Harrison, Jackson and George counties with hypertension (high blood pressure).

Lynda Rodriguez, Hancock County's representative on the committee coordinating the project, said the project will be a joint effort of the four counties.

By ELLIS CUEVAS
Mr. and Mrs. Nick Saucier appeared before the Bay St. Louis Council in reference to a utility bill in the amount of $478.21.

Mr. Saucier claimed the reason the bill was so high was because there was a leak on the rental property.

Mrs. Saucier said she didn't think they should pay for the amount lost due to the leak.

All Council members showed a concern for the residents but told them they were unable to 'eat' the bill, and we can show you thousands of dollars which were lost by the city this way," commented Councilman James Thrifley.

Councilman Harry Farve pointed out that there were water, sewer and garbage pickup in addition to the gas charges on the bill which ran from December 31, 1978 until July 31, 1979.

Council appeared to be in agreement that they wouldn't be able to make an adjustment on the bill.

Mr. Saucier said he requested the meter be cut off at the end of April because he moved to another location.

The Council told him that unless he made efforts to pay the bill, the City would have to curtail services at his new location like water, sewer and garbage collections. The new Saucier home doesn't have gas.

Another citizen was to appear before the Council but wrote a letter to the city clerk saying he would not be able to attend the meeting, requesting to appear next month instead.

A public hearing was held by the Council declaring the property of J. E. Cochran to be cleaned up.

Not representative appeared.

from New Orleans. Council heard Mrs. Miller's story on how she had been sick and unable to have the property cleared at this time at this time.

Mrs. Miller was given a 60 day extension to have the property cleared. Council voted to hold a public hearing on the Pritchard Oil Company property located corner Union Street and Ne-cause Avenue. The hearing is scheduled Oct. 16 at 7 p.m.

In reference to the delinquent utility uses, the City will post a notice on the meter of delinquent accounts when 10 days over due and will cut them off when 30 days delinquent.

Council remains firm on utility collections

Bay garbage fees doubled

By ELLIS CUEVAS

The residents of the City of Bay St. Louis face a 100 percent increase in garbage collections after Tuesday night action by the City Council.

The new rate will go into effect as soon as proper changes can be made to the ordinance.

Council wanted to put the new increase into effect immediately, but was told by Board Attorney Joseph Gerhart that the ordinance could have been amended and a public hearing held before the rate change was into effect.

Residents currently pay $1.50 per month which is included in their utility bills. The new rate will be $3 for residential and double the amount currently paid by Commercial establishments.

Council pointed out the rate increase for the increase in the city is paying $1.55 per pickup per month per household.

bids it received earlier this month for the purchase of a new fire truck.

Councilman Fred Wagner stated the reason as the bids received were too inconsistent.

The Council authorized City Clerk Kelly McGowan to re-advertise for fire truck bids.

Gumbo Festival in magazine

An elaborate feature on the upcoming Natchez Crossing Gumbo Festival is carried in the current issue of "Jackson, The Mississippi Magazine." Written by Charles L. Sullivan and entitled "Jambalaya, Crawfish Pie and Dueling Banjos," the feature carries all the color and flamboyancy of the Hancock County "happening" and describes its unusual history. It ends with an enthusiastic "Son-of-a-gun, we gonna have big fun on the bayou. Ay-eeeee. Y'all come."

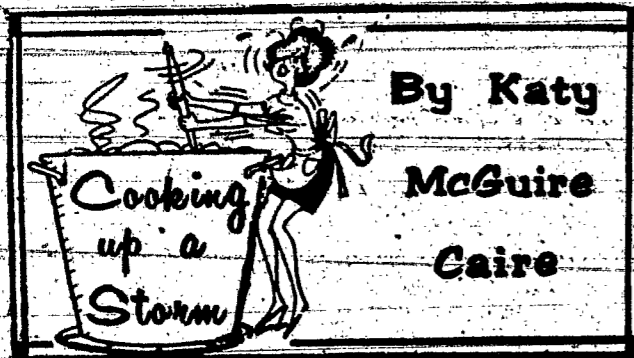

Herb Phillips, editor, publisher of the state-wide magazine, said that the story has already stirred up considerable outside interest, including a call from the Magazine Publishers Association in New York City for permission to send the feature nationwide.

Phillips said that "this sort of interest not only shows the quality of Charles Sullivan's writing, but the great appeal of the Natchez Crossing Gumbo Festival."

He predicted that it would become a top-ranked national event. "I, for one, don't plan to miss it," Phillips, a multiple award-winning writer himself, said.

The all-Mississippi magazine's September issue is on sale at newsstands state-wide.

If your budget, like most, is somewhat on the skinny side these days, but you still want to serve something good to eat, try what I call the "Splendid Stretchers" - stuffed vegetables or ground meat and vegetable mixtures.

One of the tastiest is Moussaka, almost the national dish of Greece, and quite a gourmet treat... a mixture of eggplant, ground beef, potatoes and seasonings, layered in a casserole and topped with a tasty sauce.

MOUSSAKA
3 medium eggplants
2 cup olive oil
6 medium potatoes
4 or 5 Tbsp tomato paste
2 cups chopped onion
2 garlic cloves, minced
6 Tbsp butter or margarine
Salt, pepper to taste
Bechamel Sauce

Slice the eggplant about a half-inch thick, leaving skin on, and sprinkle generously with salt so it won't be bitter, then drain for 15 or 20 minutes.

Rinse off salt, dry the eggplant, then fry a few slices at a time, taking care not to crowd the pan, in the hot oil till a nice brown on each side.

Meanwhile, slice the potatoes, peeled, about a quarter inch thick, and fry the same way, adding more oil if you need it. Saute the onion and garlic in the butter and add the ground beef, stirring and cooking for 10 minutes or so, until ready.

Add seasonings (if you really want to go more authentic Greek style, add a teaspoon each of dried mint and chopped parsley, along with a scant half teaspoon of ground cinnamon).

Cook for several more minutes, until the liquid is reduced. Then arrange a layer of the eggplant in a shallow, oiled baking dish, then a layer of potatoes and half the beef mixture. Repeat the layering.

Cover with the sauce and bake for a half-hour at 375 degrees until the sauce sets. Run the dish under the broiler a bit if it isn't browned enough to suit you (Serves 6). If you're ambitious, make your own sauce. If not, use canned cream of mushroom or celery soup. But the sauce is easy... Bechamel is just a fancy French name for white or cream sauce.

Melt a stick of butter or margarine, stir in three-fourths cup of flour, stir while cooking together, then add milk to proper consistency, along with dashes of salt and pepper, blending well. (Copyright, 1979, Katherine D.M. Caire)

BOOK REVIEW

By EDGAR PEREZ
Echo cooking columnist Katy Caire will re-issue her 96-page cookbook "Cooking Up A Storm" first published by Lafayette Publishers of Pass Christian in 1971.

The Book Boat on Scenic Drive and Market Street in Pass Christian will stage an author's autograph party from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 30 in connection with an Oct. 1 publication date.

This second edition of her collection of creole, cajun and southern recipes has been reduced from its original size of 8.5 by 11 inches to a more convenient 5.5 by 8.5 inches, according to her husband, Ronnie Caire of Pass Christian, president of Lafayette Publishers.

Caire said the book will be available in area outlets in time for Christmas giving after Oct. 1.

Katy Caire, a Bluff native, and Ronnie Caire, a former New Orleans public relations man, began publication of the Pass Christian weekly newspaper, "Echo," in 1971.

Mrs. Caire's cooking tips were a regular feature of that publication, and the book is a collection of those tips.

Mr. Caire said the book was a result of a request from a local publisher for a collection of her recipes.

He said the book is a collection of her recipes, and it is a result of a request from a local publisher for a collection of her recipes.

A message from Gil

My uncle, Andy Smith, is a retired Highway Patrolman. My mother retired from the Welfare Department. It was through them that I first learned of the damage politics does to the operation of state government.

Politics is really the root problem of corruption and inefficiency. Take out the politics, appoint people because they are qualified, and most of the problems will be solved.

In the business world you have to hire competent people or your business will suffer. Mississippi government needs to be run like a business, not a political football.

I've never been part of the old politics that has controlled state government for so long. I have run a successful business. As Governor I won't have an old political machine interfering with your business or meddling with your tax dollars.

That's how you take politics out of state government.

This time...

Our favorite intersection!

We agree with the Bay Council in its continued efforts to have something done about the inadequate signal lights at U.S.-90 and Beach Boulevard in Bay St. Louis.

The number of accidents at the intersection must be a record for the State in the past five years.

We still contend that it is beyond our realm of understanding why the Mississippi Highway Department cannot do a better job.

People have been killed, injured, hundreds of autos damaged, and still single strand signal lights remain to control a diverse flow of traffic.

If the Bay St. Louis Police Department could write a ticket for every vehicle running the red light at the intersection, the city judge would stay in session all day, seven days a week. Of course our county would again be on the American Automobile Association black list.

All the City seems to get from the State Highway Department are letters saying they are going to make a study.

Studies are good, but there should be an end to studies and some action taken after so many years.

The Bay Council has been trying to get help for the past two years, and as far as we can find out have not gotten any satisfaction.

We would like to ask you, the residents of Hancock County, just how many of your relatives or friends have been involved in an accident at this intersection?

If you start thinking, most of you will come up with several persons, and that is the reason we contend something must be done immediately, not later after study, study, study, study, study, study, study.

Mr. George E. Heitzmann

Monday was a very sad day for Hancock County residents as veteran political leader George E. Heitzmann was laid to rest. Mr. Heitzmann was known not only in Hancock County but throughout the State of Mississippi as one of the most qualified assessor-tax collectors.

Having devoted more than two-thirds of his life to the people of Hancock County through the courthouse had put him in touch with just about everyone who ever lived in this area over the past 45 years.

The best way we feel we can describe Mr. Heitzmann would be that he was a 'Hall of Fame' member in his profession.

We doubt if there has ever been or ever will be an assessor-tax collector, to be recognized by his peers as many times as Mr. Heitzmann.

A man dedicated to his family, church and most important his community and the residents of Hancock County, he will be missed by everyone.

To his family and thousands of friends, we can truthfully say that Mr. George will be remembered for many generations to come in Hancock County.

Mr. Sam Whitfield

Mr. Sam, as he was known by everyone, will long be remembered for the help he has given to so many people of Hancock County over the years.

In 1908 he was born in the booming community of Logtown in Western Hancock County.

The community was primarily known for the big lumber mill which employed hundreds of area residents.

Logtown doesn't have people living there anymore because the community was taken over by the Federal Government for the Mississippi Test Facility in the early 1950's.

Mr. Sam was the founder and president of Whitfield Timber Company, Inc., thus continuing in the industry of his birth place.

In the timber industry, Mr. Sam lived close to nature, he loved the outdoors and the many things of the woods.

A person with very much respect for God, he was a regular at Sunday School and Church each and every Sunday.

Mr. Sam was a friend to people of all ages, especially the small children. Everyone always commented on how well he was able to communicate with so many. He was a personal friend of many and a special business friend to many others.

We have been told by many of how he helped them as independent businessmen secure trucks to haul timber.

A couple years ago we were told how Mr. Sam had paid for the college education of a Bay St. Louis resident. It is probably impossible to count just how many folks Mr. Sam helped to get a start.

A friend of white, black, young and old, Mr. Sam Whitfield will long be respected as being a man devoted to God, his family and the people of Hancock County.

Opinion

NOTHING LEFT—This is all that was left after a fire killed two daughters ages four and six Wednesday, Sept. 12, children of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Mitchell in the Bienville Community. Mr. Mitchell's hands and neck were burned in efforts to try and rescue his two daughters in the burning mobile home. He was able to rescue his five year old daughter who was in the same end of the residence as he and his wife. Hancock County Sheriff Sylvan Ladner has set up an account at Hancock Bank in the name of the Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Mitchell Family. The sheriff's office will also deliver any clothing, furniture and utensils anyone would bring to the office in Bay St. Louis. Mr. Mitchell was recovering from an injury at the time of the fire, according to Sheriff Ladner, when the family lost everything. The Mitchell's surviving daughter is size five, his wife size nine and he is medium size with a waist of 32 and inseam length of 33. The family is in dire need, according to Sheriff Ladner and we have to agree with him.

Bits 'n pieces

We would like to warn the residents of the area who have had damages caused by Hurricane Frederic to check out very closely the people they hire to make repairs.

We well remember the many folks who were ripped off after Hurricane Camille by people coming in from other areas and collecting money to do repair work and the homeowner never seeing them again.

It wasn't too long ago we had a couple of people taken on repair jobs. Get references before you hire someone and do not pay them in advance.

All the assistance agencies are set up at the West Side Community Center on the beach in Gulfport. If you need any type of assistance, we suggest you go over there.

If you do not have transportation, call the Hancock County Civil Defense where Bobby Boudin, director, will help you get to the Center.

Bay Mayor Larry Bennett reported at a Bay Council meeting Tuesday night that Mississippi Governor Cliff Finch has secured special funds which can be even used for downed tree removal for families within certain income brackets. They must also apply at the West Side Community Center.

The Cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland have been going all out in efforts to clean up the many trees and limbs blown down by Frederic, even working weekends and overtime.

It is impossible for them to pick up the debris from everyone at the same time.

We can be of help to them by trying to cut the trees and limbs up in pieces easy to handle instead of leaving whole trees and limbs like we have seen in some piles.

In all probability, it is impossible to total the tonage of debris already picked up in the Bay and Waveland.

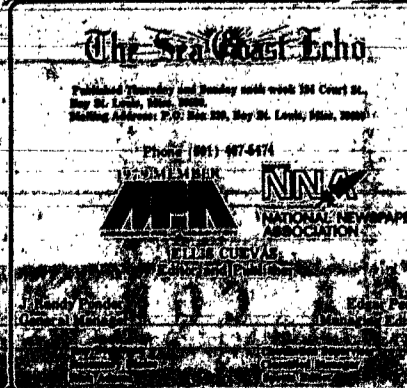

Having been through the aftermath of Camille, all we can do is compliment the many people involved in the restoration after Frederic.

The biggest word we have been able to come up with is cooperation, and we mean among everyone - the people, volunteers, political leaders, and federal government agencies.

Governor Cliff Finch especially has to be complimented on his actions, because friends, he is looking out for the people of the Mississippi Gulf Coast. We do not always agree with his politics, but we do not think anyone as governor could have done or do more than Governor Finch.

Reader files own 'protest' about meeting

Sept. 16, 1979
Sea Coast Echo

Dear Editor:

In regards to the news item reported "Protest on Hancock nominee, pg. c10, Sunday paper, Sept. 16, 1979 The Sun, The Daily Herald, by Bill Gaudet, I am protesting.

There were about 25 people including the Election Commission. That is a far cry from 50 people Gaudet reported.

These people included other independent candidates. Only 2 people out of 25 protested against the candidacy of Thad Haskins, not "many" as reported.

One protester was a parent and the other was his opponent, Billy Sills.

This is not the first time this reporter has reported with such inaccuracies.

If you can't send in another reporter in his place to get the facts then stay out of my communities affairs. Maybe Gaudet wasn't even at the meeting.

If I sound upset it is because this type of reporting has happened repeatedly by him.

I am for free press, but an accurate free press, please.

Thank you

Election Commission

meeting report questioned

Sept. 16, 1979
Editor
Sea Coast Echo

I am very appreciative of the accuracy of the reporting in the Sea Coast Echo.

After reading Sunday's edition of the Sun-The Daily Herald, I am beginning to believe that any article written by Sun Correspondent Bill Gaudet should be prefaced by the statement "This is a fictionalized account of this event. Any similarity between the actual event and this reporter's account of it is purely accidental."

When the Hancock County Election Commission met to certify the persons who filed to run as independent candidates, there were less than 25 people in the audience, not 50.

Only two people (not many, as was stated) protested the candidacy of Thad Haskins (yes, Mr. Gaudet, Haskins - not Askins).

Of course, it is very easy to misconstrue the facts when you are not there to see what actually occurred. I was at the meeting. I did not see Mr. Gaudet.

Summer reading tutors

contributed to successful program

Editor
Sea Coast Echo

Dear Sir:

I wish to give thanks to all the volunteer tutors who worked with me this summer on the one-to-one Summer Reading Program sponsored by the Friends of the Hancock County Library.

Also special thanks to Cathy Owens and everyone at the Library as well as Mrs. Theresa James, director of the RSVP Program for the help given in enlisting tutors.

The program encountered a few problems due to so much bad stormy weather and also some students going on vacation.

However, despite the problem, I feel we did meet the objectives of the program, the chief objective being to encourage the students to read by helping them choose books to suit their interests and reading level.

Each tutor met with his/her student for at least 1 hour each week during June and July.

In addition to listening to the student read, there were several activities related to reading that the tutor could do with the student.

Anyone interested in signing up for the program for next year, please leave your name, address and phone no. at the Library.

Thank you, tutors, for giving your time and talents.

Sincerely
Mrs. Esther Oschmann

Sept. 17, 1979

Dear Mr. Editor:

I am writing this letter to praise our staff and most of all to Mrs. Eve McDonald for the wonderful job they did getting all the Old Senior Citizens together at the Center to weather out the bad storm that was coming our way.

But thank God it wasn't so bad for us folks here.

Mrs. Eve and our wonderful staff left their families to look out for us.

They also cooked a big pot of soup to warm us up, and saw that we had a place to sleep.

Our thanks go out to all of the other fine people and RSVP for giving us a helping hand. I don't know what we would do without them.

Thank you, Mrs. Eve, you have a crown in Heaven. We all love you. Please don't ever leave us.

God bless

Washington report

By Trent Lott

THE AFTERMATH OF 'FREDERIC': LET'S CLIMB HIGHER

South Mississippi from Laurel to the Gulf Coast, has been struck again by a hurricane of epic proportion. Eleven of the 12 counties in the Fifth Congressional District were included in the disaster declaration last week by President Carter.

As of this writing, damages were still being assessed. It seems that the hardest hit area of the Mississippi Gulf Coast was the Pascagoula vicinity, although damages were recorded elsewhere.

After personally surveying the devastated area and visiting with those residents who suffered losses, it is apparent that the immediate needs are for temporary housing and food.

My role is to insure that the residents of the affected counties are informed of the Federal disaster relief available to them and to coordinate the efforts of the various Federal, State and local agencies.

It is my hope that the residents of the affected counties will be able to receive the relief they need as quickly as possible.

It is my hope that the residents of the affected counties will be able to receive the relief they need as quickly as possible.

Disaster Assistance Centers are open to aid the victims of Hurricane Frederic, and I urge those persons affected to apply for assistance as quickly as possible.

Three assistance programs available to provide the most immediate relief are:

Temporary housing for homeless victims until other housing resources are available. No rental will be charged for up to 30 days.

Distribution of food coupons to eligible disaster victims.

Job placement assistance for persons laid off by the hurricane, without employment.

These programs will be available in the affected counties in the days following the disaster. It is my hope that the residents of the affected counties will be able to receive the relief they need as quickly as possible.

It is my hope that the residents of the affected counties will be able to receive the relief they need as quickly as possible.

Storm-related income losses may be covered

Fourteen Mississippi counties including Hancock have been declared eligible for Disaster Unemployment Assistance as a result of damage from Hurricane Frederic.

"If you live or work in one of the affected counties and if you are self-employed or work for someone who is not covered by Unemployment Insurance, you may be eligible for the Disaster Unemployment Assistance benefit," said Edgar C. Lloyd Jr., executive director of the Mississippi Employment Security Commission.

"DUA benefits will be available to those people who have become unemployed as a result of the recently declared disaster and are not covered under the regular Unemployment Insurance Program," said Lloyd. Eligibility for DUA will be determined on a week-to-week basis. The first week of assistance will be paid with the week ending September 22, 1979.

Those filing have 30 days from September 15, 1979 to make their initial claims and should bring Social Security numbers and, if possible, any papers showing earnings and employment prior to the disaster.

In addition to DUA, the Service Offices of the Mississippi Employment Security Commission will be providing re-employment assistance services to individuals who are unemployed as a result of the disaster.

Claims may be filed at the nearest Unemployment Insurance Office or itinerant point.

Information regarding filing a claim and location of the claim offices and itinerant points may be secured at the Disaster Assistance Centers located in the West Side Community House, Gulfport, MS; the Civic Center in Pascagoula, MS; and at the National Guard Armory, Lucedale.

The following counties are included in the disaster proclamation: Hancock, Harrison, Jackson, George, Stone, Pearl River, Forrest, Perry, Greene, Wayne, Jones, Covington, Clarke and Lauderdale.

Hancock Headstart seeking teachers

Mississippi for Progress, the administering agency of Headstart programs in Hancock County, is currently seeking teachers and teacher aids.

Sullivan Bell, director, said vacancies exist in all three of the county's Headstart centers.

Bell said he is currently seeking a teacher aid and janitor for the Mt. Zion Center, United Methodist Church, Pearlinton.

A temporary teacher aid is needed at the Catahoula center, Sellers Baptist Church, Hwy. 43.

The Bay-Waveland Headstart Center at St. Rose de

Lima School in Bay St. Louis is in need of a teacher aid and temporary teacher aid, Bell reported.

For information, call the director or Mrs. Mary Smith, Headstart coordinator, at 467-7041.

Added benefits possible under VA pension laws

A number of veterans and widows of veterans must soon decide whether they should change benefits under the new Veterans Administration pension law which went into effect last January 1.

According to Mike Ladner, Hancock County veteran service officer, a veteran or widow who can receive greater benefits under the new law can have the increased amounts paid back to January 1, 1979.

Any elections made on or after that date will provide the added benefits only from the time it is received.

The new pension law provides for automobile increases each June 1 based on the cost of living index. Effective June 1, 1979, a veteran with no dependents is guaranteed an annual income of $3,902.

Subtract from that figure would be any other income which he might have. If he has a dependent wife or child, he is entitled to $5,112 per year.

A widow with no children has entitlement to $2,615 per year, less any other income she might have. If she has a dependent child, the annual amount is now $3,425.

Any veteran or widow who is interested may visit the local veterans service office to discuss their individual entitlement under the new pension law.

If a change to the new law will be to their advantage, pensioners already receiving VA benefits under previous laws may change to the new law or remain under their present eligibility, whichever is to their advantage.

For additional information, contact Ladner at 467-2100.

VISION DAMAGE

In glaucoma, the fluid that cleans and lubricates the lens of the eye doesn't drain away properly, causing pressure that permanently damages vision and can lead to total blindness. The Mississippi Society to Prevent Blindness reports that 6,000 Americans are blinded each year by glaucoma, because they don't know they have the disease until it is too late to prevent its damage. Glaucoma blindness can be prevented. See your doctor every two years.

SENIOR CITIZEN EVENTS

By Eve McDonald

HURRICANE

Thank goodness it missed us! We had 20 volunteers at our shelter here at the Center in Bay St. Louis. We did not encourage you to come as it was much more comfortable at home, but some of you are frightened to stay alone, so we were welcome here.

Juilette Cook, RN, was kind enough to act as our shelter nurse and we appreciated it very much. We had many other volunteers that helped each other around here, and we thank them.

The staff was a big help too. We could not operate without their help and cooperation. Some left children with relatives and came to run this shelter. That's over and above duty - thanks!

We have the greatest appreciation of the Red Cross, Civil Defense, city and county officials, and their staff and helpers. The Fire Department got our cots set up, CD and our officials were over here several times to make sure that the seniors were taken care of. We surely don't feel neglected in Hancock County!

RSVP Theresa James asked us to remind all of the RSVP volunteers that the annual awards luncheon will be Monday, Oct. 1 at the American Legion Hall in Waveland, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

We don't know if Lt. Gov. Evelyn Gandy will be able to come at this time, but we will still have someone else give out the special awards to the volunteers.

This event had to be postponed due to the storm. Most of us did not feel up to having a party when there was so much to do.

SINGING SENIORS The Singing Seniors were invited to the Gulfport Convalescent Center to sing for the patients there. They really had a good old fashion gospel sing with everyone participating. The event was enjoyed by all so much that they will be going again next month.

Later this month this same group will be in Jackson performing for Senior Citizen Appreciation Day. We sure are proud of our singing group.

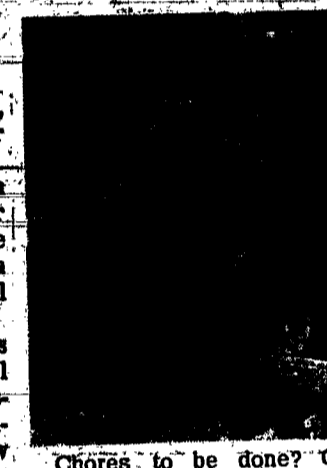

ART CLASS Carl Beldenhor's art class is going to New Orleans Friday to observe the artists in the French Quarter. They will have lunch there and see what there is to see in the art shops and stalls. I think some of our artists could teach the New Orleans artists a few things!

Frederic puts Biloxi hotel temporarily 'out of service'

The Royal d'Iberville Hotel on Biloxi's beachfront this week reported suspension of its public operations because of damage suffered during Hurricane Frederic.

Royal d'Iberville President John Neyrey and Hotel Manager Gaston Correa, said all public operations and functions of the hotel have been suspended "until further notice" because of extensive water damage and some structural damage as a result of the storm. Consultants told hotel officials repairs necessary to put the luxury resort on an operational status will take at least 30 days. Much of the hotel's roof was blown away by Frederic, causing extensive water damage to the northside rooms in the hotel's main, or tower, section.

Many of the rooms in the motel section of the hotel's north side were also damaged by water because of roofing damage.

The Royal d'Iberville's la Grande Ballroom, where banquet and other public functions for large groups are held, suffered structural damage when pieces of the main roof apparently dropped onto the ceiling covering the ballroom facilities.

"While damage to the Royal d'Iberville was extensive, our damage in no way compares with that suffered by many families and businesses along the Gulf Coast," Neyrey said.

"And, to those people, we offer our sincere sympathy. There is an old saying that when God gives you a lemon, the best thing to do is to make lemonade."

"Our damage is considerably less than that experienced by many of our friends, and for that, we are grateful," he added.

Rail demonstration to bypass stricken areas

Ocean Springs and Pascagoula will be eliminated from the route of a citizens caravan Saturday to demonstrate an alleged need for railroad passenger service on the Mississippi Coast, according to R. J. Calre, Pass Christian, spokesman for Sons of Lafitte, sponsoring organization.

"It would be unfair to ask the people of Jackson County to interrupt their work of repairing Hurricane damage even for so important a cause as rail passenger service," Calre explained. "We are still fighting for rail passenger service from Waveland to Pascagoula, however."

The caravan will begin in Waveland on US-90 at 10 a.m. Saturday with stops and demonstrations at Bay St. Louis, Pass Christian, Long Beach, Gulfport, and will conclude at the Golden Fisherman statue in Biloxi.

"Since Harry Reeks, wagonmaster of the Caravan, was the creator of this statue it is fitting that the demonstration should climax at the Golden Fisherman," said Calre.

Parade Marshalls include Rudy Vorbusch, Waveland; Mayor Larry Bennett, Bay St. Louis; Russell Ringer, Pass Christian; Police Chief Harry Kaletsch, Long Beach; and Mrs. Alice M. Dalche, senior citizen, Gulfport.

"The new route will eliminate the necessity of parading on Sunday," Calre pointed out.

Hancock storm shelters Red Cross coordinated

By ELLIS CUEVAS

During Hurricane Frederic's pass through Hancock County, the Hancock County Chapter, American Red Cross, staffed four shelters, according to Bill Hoffman, disaster chairman, and Charlie Barrack, chapter chairman. Chapter officials reported a total of 68 people were housed at the four shelters which included Bay Junior High, Waveland Elementary, Annunciation School and Infant of Prague Church at Nease Crossing.

"We wish to thank all the volunteers who helped to man these shelters during the storm. Everyone co-operated very well," the two chairmen reported.

"The Hancock County Sheriff's Department, Cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland provided officers at the respective shelters, and the schools provided a representative which really helped during the crisis," Hoffman said.

Robert Boudin, Hancock County Civil Defense Director, also reported during the crisis," Hoffman said.

Robert Boudin, Hancock County Civil Defense director, also reported that there wasn't any need of picking up the people. "They came on their own," he said.

"When we gave the word to evacuate, everyone came out of the low lying areas. The Mississippi National Guard has 12 Larks on standby with 45 men ready to go if needed, Boudin allowed.

Boudin stated this was the third evacuation of some people this year. The flooding of Pearl River, Hurricanes Bob and Frederic.

Barrack commented, "In the shelters we had people of all ages, an infant one week old, a lady 94 and one woman eight months pregnant."

There was continuous communications throughout the night between all agencies, according to Boudin. "The hospital, sheriff's office, Bay St. Louis, Waveland, county officials, Red Cross, Civil Defense and National Guard, we knew exactly what everyone was doing," Boudin reported.

"The Civil Defense office has made arrangements with St. Stanislaus to take people in their infirmary who are not really sick enough to go to a hospital but need special care. They have nurses on duty in the infirmary," Boudin stressed.

"I hope the people will continue to listen to requests to evacuate whenever required too. I realize this time we didn't get much damage, because we were to the West of the hurricane. We must remember we only missed the blunt of Frederic by 50 miles," commented Hoffman.

In addition to local Red Cross volunteers, four other Red Cross people were in Hancock County for the storm, according to Hoffman.

Mrs. Thelma Kergosien, executive secretary for the local Red Cross Chapter, reports she is still receiving many telephone calls checking on the conditions of residents of the area.

The regular meeting of the Red Cross will be tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Civil Defense Headquarters in the Valena C. Jones Complex. The Chapter meet third Thursday each month.

Boudin, Hoffman and Barrack remind people of Hancock County needing assistance to apply at the West Side Community Center, Gulfport.

Boudin said, "If anyone is in need of transportation, call the Civil Defense office, and we will try to make arrangements for them."

Hoffman had special praises for the local merchants for their cooperation with the Red Cross in purchasing needed food items which his organization cannot keep on hand at all times.

The Hancock County Chapter of the American Red Cross receives over 90 percent of its funding from the United Way of Hancock County.

Barry and Nina Garcia, US-90, Waveland, will remember the conditions encountered by the people of Hancock County after the devastation caused by Hurricane Camille.

So with those memories still fresh in mind, they are collecting food, water, soap, and other necessities to take to the residents of Pascagoula, one of the hardest hit areas of the Gulf Coast.

The Garcia's are also collecting clothing, blankets, and other necessities for the people of the area. They are also collecting money for the people of the area.

as charcoal, Coleman fuel and candles are needed.

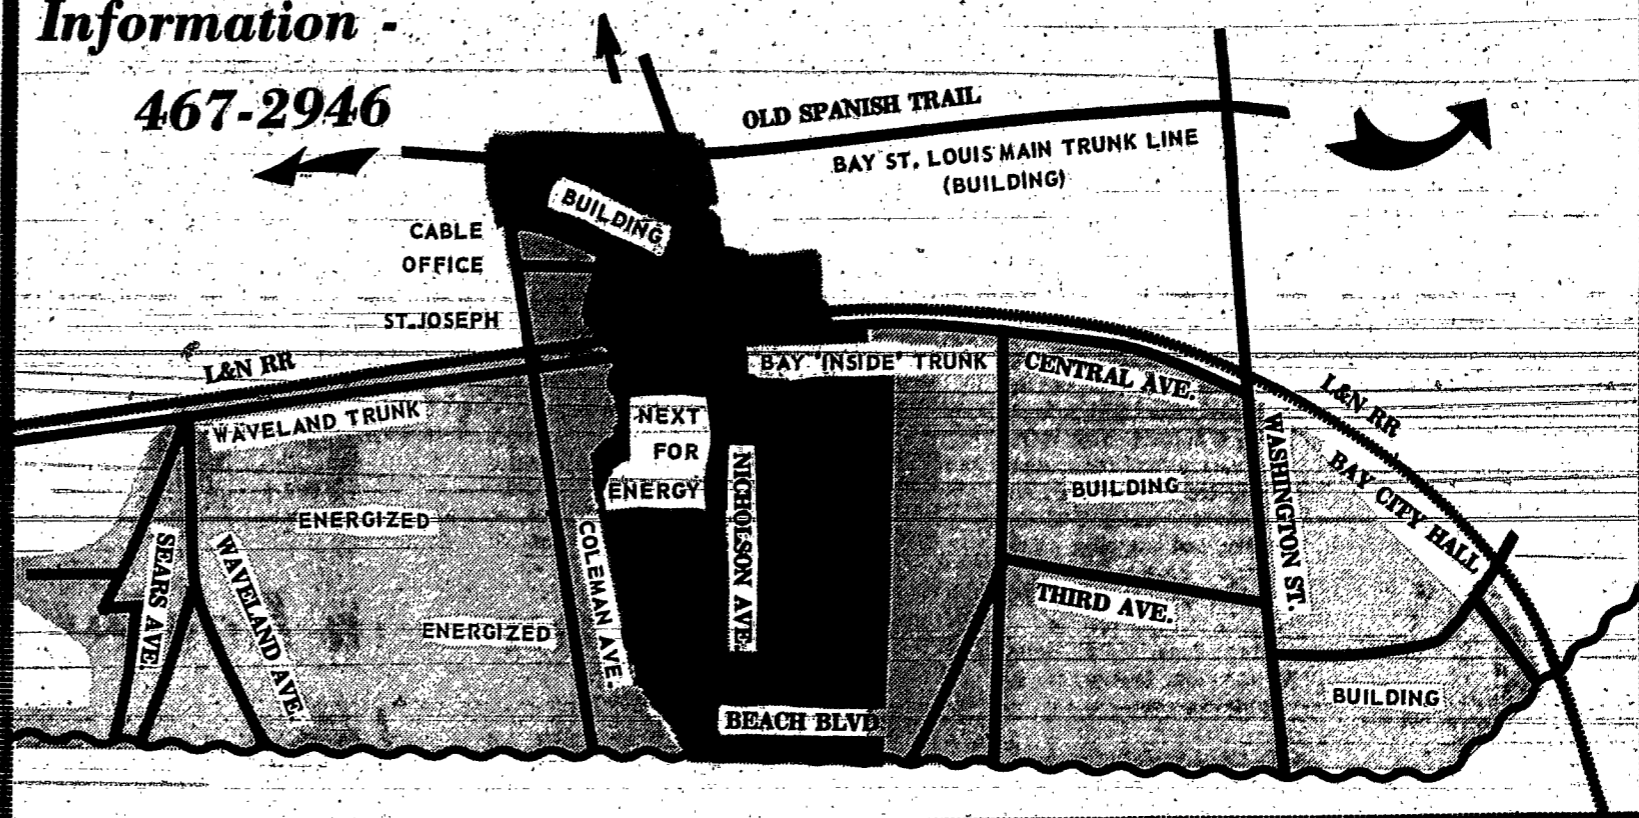

Persons unable to deliver items to the Garcia's should call them at 467-7626 and they will pick up if possible.

Dynamic woman executive serves Hancock UW agency

By Grace Gibson
For United Way

A dynamic Hancock County banking executive, mother of nine and grandmother of five, is the county's representative on the board of directors of the Gulf Coast Mental Health Center in Gulfport, one of the major United Way agencies serving this area.

Anita Lamb, known to almost everyone as Neetsy, is the mother of seven boys and two girls ranging in age from 14 through 33 years.

This daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Duncan of New Orleans is a native of that city, but she and her husband, William R. Lamb, moved to the Gulf Coast in 1950, back when there were only five children in the family.

They love Bay St. Louis and believe it is a wonderful place in which to rear children.

As for New Orleans, they appreciate being able to visit that city but never plan to live there again.

When Mrs. Lamb decided to join the work force after being "only" a wife and mother, she worked part time as a teller in the branch of the Hancock Bank located at the test site, finding her four years stay there very interesting with many people from diverse places there at the time.

For awhile, Anita decided not to work outside, enjoying her children and her lovely home on the beach. It is a happy house, but the Lambs also believe that Bay St. Louis is a happy place, offering youngsters more freedom than a large city.

Following Hurricane Camille's 1969 visit, the Lamb family spent that school year in New Orleans, living with an aunt while their home was being repaired and moving back to the Bay the following summer.

Neetsy returned to work then and has been with the Gulf National Bank on Highway 90 ever since, working her way up to her current position of assistant cashier and assistant manager of this branch.

She has worked with the association for Retarded

Persons, serving as president for several years.

She was the first woman president of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce, has served on the boards of the Hancock County Library and the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club and on the Parish Council of Our Lady of the Gulf Church.

As well as being Hancock County's representative on the Board of the Gulf Coast Mental Health Center, Mrs. Lamb has served for quite a while as treasurer of the Hancock County Easter Seal Committee, and has been an office holder in the Friends of the Library, working with this group for several years.

With all this activity, Neetsy still finds time to enjoy her five grandchildren.

Neetsy and Billy have always enjoyed swimming and sailing with their children and are looking forward to teaching these sports to their grandchildren. Married 35 years last August, the Lambs still enjoy having two of their children living with them at home.

Neetsy lives each day for itself. Her religion plays a large part in her daily life and in her family's life. She believes, as most Christians do, that God has been good to her family. And she appreciates sincerely the support her husband has always provided for her many activities, for, as she says, no wife and mother can accomplish too much without the backing and support of her husband and family.

Her efforts have in no small measure been responsible for her success of the Gulf Coast Mental Health Center which opened in September, 1970 serving Hancock, Harrison, Stone and Pearl River Counties. It has handled 15,715 cases since its inception, with 147 currently active cases in Hancock County. There are ten to fifteen new cases each month in Hancock County.

Dr. Catherine Lundy of the Center conducts office hours the St. Augustine Seminary for 2 1/2 days each week. Dr. Lundy holds a PhD in psychology.

Thomas Dillworth, a psychologist, also serves one day weekly at St. Augustine's Seminary.

Anyone desiring an appointment may call toll free 863-1132.

July 1 saw the opening of Hancock Industries on Highway 90 in Bay St. Louis. This is an adult work activity center for retarded persons. It is fully staffed with five competent people who currently serve ten persons although there is room for 30.

Hancock Industries trains retarded adults to take their place in the active work force. After training, a member goes with the new employee to make sure he can handle the work.

Those not capable of working at an employer's place of business, can work through contracts with the center - at the center and thus may earn a living.

Those interested in enrolling should contact the Department of Public Welfare and inquire about vocational rehabilitation.

Bay American Legion promises rodeo revival

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

The Bay St. Louis Clement R. Bon-temps American Legion Post No. 139 will revive its annual fishing rodeo next summer.

Harold Saucier, post commander, appointed Audie Murphy, Ray Murphy, Mike Witter and Roger Dedaux as co-chairmen for the event which will be staged in late July.

The Legion Post sponsored fishing rodeos years ago before their long peer at the head of Washington Street was destroyed by a storm.

The rodeo will be open to all ages, according to the chairmen, and will be divided into adult and children's divisions.

Trophies and prizes will be awarded for the different categories of fish.

As Post spokesman said damage to Legion Pier inflicted by Hurricane Bob in July will be repaired following close of the current hurricane season.

Hancock County can appeal the decision made by the Washington office.

The procedure is to have that county's congressional district appeal the decision, which includes Sen. Thad Cochran and Rep. Trent Lott.

"Hancock County was included in a separate, special declaration and was not in the original declaration for emergency relief. This may have been the reason the county was denied the funding in Washington," Shaw remarked.

He said the other counties sustained widespread damage whereas Hancock County's damage was to the beach road solely.

Hancock County Board of Supervisors Monday accepted a bid by Crown Equipment Co. of Bay St. Louis to repair heavily damaged sections of beach road between Waveland Avenue and Clement Harbor in Beat One.

Beat One Supervisor Bert Courge lamented, "We either have to begin repairing the damage or close the road."

The supervisor had previously said he hopes to be reimbursed by the federal government for expenses used to repair the beach road in Beat One.

Courge stated that the most dangerous sections of that road are near Waveland Avenue and Market Street.

James (Buddy) Bynum, Lott's press secretary in Washington, said Wednesday, "Mr. Lott is aware of the Federal Highway Administration's refusal of Hancock County's application. The congressman has a number of members in Gulfport and Washington working on the application."

He said that the congressman has a number of members in Gulfport and Washington working on the application.

Pearlington man booked in burglary

By ELLIS CUEVAS

The Hancock County Sheriff's office Tuesday, recovered items from a Pearlington residence which reportedly had been stolen in Pass Christian.

Arrested for burglary and possession of stolen goods was John Parrish, Pearlington, according to Sheriff Sylvan J. Ladner.

The sheriff said Parrish was being held on a $5,000 bond for Harrison County authorities.

Sheriff Ladner said he received a telephone call from Harvey Carter, Route 2, Box 400, Pass Christian, reporting items such as mechanic's tools, butane tank, 8 track tape player, spare tire, air compressor, etc., had been stolen from his residence.

An investigation led to a search of the Parrish residence Monday with a written permission received from Mrs. Parrish, according to Sheriff Ladner. The search turned up nothing reportedly stolen.

On Tuesday morning, Sheriff Ladner said he received a tip that some merchandise was hidden in the woods near that Pearlington residence.

Upon further investigation by Deputies Delbert Seay and Alvin Ladner, the items reported stolen from the Pass Christian residence were recovered, according to the sheriff's report.

An affidavit and warrant were signed by Justice Court Judge Vernon Ladner of Harrison County for the arrest of John Parrish, and he was then picked up, according to Sheriff Ladner, and held for the Harrison County authorities.

Frederick damages local pecan crop

By LESLIE WILLIAMS

Hurricane Frederick's high winds damaged approximately 80 percent of Hancock County's pecan crop, County Agent John Smith reports.

The high winds of the hurricane simply "blew the nuts off the trees," Smith explained.

Soybean and corn crops received only minor damage," Smith continued.

Smith said about 15 to 20 percent of the county's 12,000 acres of soybeans and 1,000 acres of corn were damaged by the storm.

The agent said he has filed a damage report with United States Department of Agriculture, which could make farmers with losses eligible for low interest loans.

"Most of the corn crop had been harvested before the storm came," Smith added.

"The winds from Hurricane Frederick either blew it away or the winds damaged the light and the Mississippi Highway Department took it away for repairs," he said.

The officer added, "The Mississippi Highway Department is responsible for replacing the traffic light."

Glaucoma warnings demand attention

The National Society to Prevent Blindness warns that people who need frequent changes in glasses and find they still have difficulty seeing well, those whose eyes do not adjust properly to theaters or other dark rooms, those who have lost some of their peripheral vision, or side vision, and those who see halos or rainbows around light, may have glaucoma and should be tested by an eye physician without delay.

"It is vitally important that anyone who has signs of glaucoma get proper medical attention right away," said Robert Townsend, president of NSP's Mississippi affiliate.

"When glaucoma is detected and treated early, loss of vision can be prevented, but any damage done cannot be corrected," he warned.

Referring to glaucoma as the nation's leading cause of irreversible blindness, Townsend said that it afflicts an estimated two million Americans, half of whom do not know that they have it.

There are probably 15,500 people in Mississippi with glaucoma and half of them are not aware they have it.

"It should be emphasized that people who do not have the symptoms of glaucoma cannot assume that they have nothing to worry about," he said.

The disease often progresses very slowly over a long period of time, causing serious damage before the person realizes that anything is wrong. That's why it is so important that everyone get an eye examination at least once every two years.

State Farm Bureau official describes experience during Hurricane Frederic

Ag Affairs

by Ed Blake

RIDING OUT FREDERIC
Trying to keep abreast of agriculture's main events sometimes brings this ag reporter into the mainstream of action—a premise hardly ever more significant than this week as I headed to the southeast corner of Mississippi to report on Hurricane Frederic's epic visit to the state.

Hurricanes and farmlands don't get along very well together so the coverage was slanted perhaps from the outset. But neither do hurricanes and forests or cities make the best mixers.

The radio was describing preparedness and the resident exodus from the Coast as I headed southward from Jackson. My original plan was to go down Highway 90 to Gulfport and hence to Pascagoula, Mississippi's next door neighbor to Mobile, calculated landfall of the storm already tagged one of the century's deadliest.

The stream of refugees from the pending storm got thicker as I headed south and before reaching Hattiesburg I figured that I would probably get caught in traffic congestion and management later in the day to hinder my movement closest to Pascagoula.

So I left the main highway and took a southeasterly course that would put me near or at Pascagoula before Frederic.

All roads were clogged with traffic in their northbound lanes, but before 5:00 p.m. I emerged on U.S. 90 near Gaudier and decided to check out the situation in Pascagoula at least while I could before the storm. Besides, all motels to the north seemed full of evacuees.

I checked into Travelers Motor Lodge facing north on U.S. 90 in Pascagoula after questioning the lady at the desk about its elevation above the anticipated tide mark of 15 feet. Assured that it was above tide mark I was given room 230, moved in, and went into the restaurant and sat just inside the huge glass window to watch the developing storm.

About a dozen REA trucks were outside on the parking lot and the soon to be busy linesmen were pecked around the tables eating heartily. I read the paper as I ate, carefully noting significant predictions—particularly comparing Frederic's anticipated velocity with devastating Camille's ten years ago.

This was important as I had decided to ride out Frederic there at the Travelers Lodge so I would be on location Thursday for my post-hurricane coverage—particularly with respect to stopping facilities on the west bank of the Pascagoula River. Biloxi's mayor, Guion, had been quoted on the radio as saying that "all hell would break loose about 5:00 p.m."

I finished my meal after snipping several pictures through the big glass window of the building, storm and myself out of the room which the waitresses already had closed off with a red velvet cord. I was the last person there.

Room 230 was in the rear center of the hotel's three-story building. Behind the window which opened into the parking lot and onto the street, a motley group of people were sitting and standing. A crowd of about 20 people was gathered in the parking lot. A crowd of about 20 people was gathered in the parking lot. A crowd of about 20 people was gathered in the parking lot.

constantly popped off for a short span and then back on. As darkness came the power outages were more significant as the bedlam thickened outside.

I watched the first 30 minutes of "HoloCaust"—then power went off permanently. Frederic faced my room head-on—the pulling surges of pressure roaring across U.S. 90, tearing at the canopy beside the office and hence to blast the row of rooms obstructing the run back to the sea.

My car was parked beneath me and my first concern was that it would be struck by the pieces of sheet metal now tearing off from the front canopy and sailing through the air. Each piece as it severed itself flew toward the row of rooms, some striking parked cars and lodging against or beneath them.

First I smelled and felt grit in the room. As I checked my belongings and my hair it was full of gritty plaster and particles of celotex. Huddled by flashlight I tried to gather up my belonging to put them back into my suitcase. Too late. Already water was streaming through new cracks in the roof right on top of my bed. The carpet turned mushy with water at every step.

I grabbed up my recorder which I had turned on to record sounds of the storm inside the closed room. It was covered with grit but still was running.

I jumped up and into the suitcase to save it from the water now streaming into the room. The pulsing howls of the wind was tearing at the roof over the catwalk outside the rooms. I stood beside the window to note that suddenly there was no longer an overhang over the two rooms to my left as I looked out. Then mine was gone.

Next there was a heavy crash and rumble that jolted the foundations of the structure. I heard masonry sounding across the roof. I retreated momentarily to the still enclosed bathroom, but emerged moments later to find my white ceiling—the entire front section of it—had tumbled.

No, on second look it wasn't there, but I was gazing into the black sky above. I wondered what would go next as I gathered up my suitcase, camera bag and retreated into the bathroom and closed the door for both protection and to shut out some of the roar of the disaster.

I had a customary conference with the Lord as I sat in the bathtub—intending to ride both the first and latter to the first floor level if matters continued to worsen.

Sitting in the tub—the plumbing struck but spilling notably into an ironically still operating drainage system. I was learning to read each pressure surge, following it to its full intensity and wondering what would go at the next peak.

The hull of the eye finally came—and I grabbed my suitcase, camera bag and retreated into the bathroom and closed the door for both protection and to shut out some of the roar of the disaster.

I finished my meal after snipping several pictures through the big glass window of the building, storm and myself out of the room which the waitresses already had closed off with a red velvet cord. I was the last person there.

bedraggled as it was—and down to a lower level.

There I ran into others emerging from rooms—I soon saw that my room and its neighbors were in worse shape than the others not facing Frederic's bad breath. I set my gear into a stairwell still intact as motel guests gathered on the first floor level on both until then who was hurt. I found the young couple was looking to me for guidance. He was a young sailor whose ship, a destroyer, had set out to sea to ride out the storm. But he was scared and admittedly so.

We three knew we could not return to our rooms for Act II after the eye. We had to do specific about us leaving the wrecked motel. Again the couple turned to me and asked what I was going to do. I said I was going to the shelter and soon it was apparent that all were voluntarily or involuntarily. All pitched in to board the tall vehicle that already had lost its canvas canopy for the ride through on my way to photograph, interview, and observe Frederic's visit to the area.

The sun was shining as I made my way down to U.S. 90. The businesses were open in a different way—like no roofs or fronts and their merchandise spilling out onto the streets. I stopped to help a man pull a big limb out of the street. Ba-ports much of Mississippi's soybean crop, and the port warehouse.

The large metal warehouses were totally in shambles on the north side—facing Frederic's onslaught. Bales of merchandise from Indonesia were sodden under the sun. A small boat was towing a small ship away from the pier as I filmed the port damage.

And now the good news. The grain elevator which stands like a landmark sentinel on the west bank of the east branch of the Pascagoula River stood largely unscathed. A large mass of blue steel lay beside it the size of several boxcars side by side, and I inquired of an early arriving Dreyfus Corporation official how important the detached piece was.

He indicated that it was a comparative trifle and the elevator would be ready for the new crop soybean arrivals which will begin in two weeks.

Beside the elevator a ship was still berthed, having ridden out the storm at docks. It had been caught there in the middle of the loading process and elected to remain. It appeared okay.

Police were closely patrolling downtown Pascagoula as I left town for the country. Soon I ran into a National Guard roadblock and had to do it their way—exiting to I-10 and hence to Highway 49 for my return to Jackson. I photographed the damaged roadways and forests and observed communities working together with chainsaws and trucks to clear highways and local roads.

Some were removing trees from house-tops. On I-10 I was behind a young man who suddenly stopped and crossed the median and disappeared into the weeds taking a short cut to an exploded trailer home—apparently his.

Agriculturally, Hurricane Frederic's damage was apparently less than expected in the zone northward up the Mississippi-Alabama line. My colleague Ken Parks set out Thursday to trace it through the farmlands of southeast Mississippi and reported damage to crops amazingly light. Most damage was to buildings and trees, yet the forests were not generally left leaning and broken as in Camille's path.

MORNING AFTER—Deserted roads and beaches prevailed Thursday morning as Gulf Coast citizens awoke to assess the damage incurred by Hurricane Frederic. Damage in Hancock County was minimal with increasing degrees of damage on down the Coast all the way to Mobile, Ala., which received the brunt of the storm. No boats remained in the Long Beach Harbor, above, as memories of Hurricane Camille in 1969 were fresh in the resident's minds. (Staff photo—Rich Adams)

the rebuilding wind and rain to Clay elementary school.

The eye was over just as we arrived and were filed into the corridors already full of refugees. The rest of the night was comparatively dull, but much safer. The school was apparently designed partly with storm safety in mind and the corridors particularly insulated us from the sounds and fury of the storm outside.

Once, during the remaining hours of the night, a large group filed through vacating a cafeteria room struck by a falling tree where the room was leaking and in danger of disintegrating.

Three pregnant women were among the approximate 350 persons at the school. Shortly before dawn I heard ladies announcing among themselves that the three had been taken to Singing River hospital and one had delivered.

The weight and well being of the new baby was discussed and rejoiced over by the voices in the darkness sitting and lying on the floor. I never heard its sex however and still wonder if he or she was named Fred or Frederica.

It was a slow dawn from my perch on the clean tile floor, but finally it dawned and moments later after thanking the efficient young lady who with others ran the shelter I stepped outside to walk back to the motel, hoping that my car too had survived so I could be better. The woman said there was a laundry room nearby on the first floor level. I set out to check it out and found the floor covered with six inches of water.

The young couple was going where I went so as we prepared to move in a son of the motel operator appeared and offered his room on the first floor paralleling the counter pressure that would follow.

We took him up on the offer and headed in the room just as the loud wail of a National Guard truck was heard and wading guardsmen and police with bullhorns and high-powered lights arrived offering a ride to a storm center.

He didn't sound like it was mandatory at first so we considered the relative risks involved. Guard reinforcements arrived a bit more

In the five states that accounted for about 26 percent of the hatch of all egg-type chicks in the U.S. in 1978, settings during the week ending September 8, 1979 were down 16 percent.

There were 5,093,000 broiler chicks placed on Mississippi farms during the week ending September 8, 1979, 6 percent below the previous week and 4 percent below the corresponding week a year ago.

Cumulative placements for 1979 are 206,536,000 broiler chicks—2 percent above a year earlier.

Hatcheries in the State set 373,000 eggs for egg-type chicks during the week ending September 8, 1979, 19 percent above the previous week and 12 percent above the previous week but 7 percent below the 219,000 hatched during the comparable week a year ago.

USM language professor attends Belfast seminar

This summer methods currently being used in the University of Southern Mississippi School for Children with Language Disorders (SCLD) were taught to teachers in Canada and Ireland by a USM professor and a speech-language pathologist. Dr. Etelle DuBard, director of the SCLD conducted a one-week workshop at Queen's University in Belfast, Northern Ireland for psychologists, speech therapists and teachers of the deaf. She was assisted by Maureen K. Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe W. Martin Sr. of Pascagoula.

DR. MAUREEN K. MARTIN week course in which she was the only American instructor invited.

Martin, a supervisor in the SCLD also served as an instructor in an intensive training course for Canadian teachers of the hearing impaired and teachers of children with language, learning and speech disorders. The course was held at the Sir James Whitney School for the Deaf in Belleville, Ontario.

The two weeks of lectures and demonstrations given by Martin at the invitation of the Canadian Ministry of Education, were part of a five-

DuBard is the author of a textbook on theory and application of the association method, which uses visual spoken and written forms of words in teaching language and speech to the impaired children.

The workshop she conducted was set up by the County Down Department of Education at the request of the Belfast Society of Speech Impaired Children.

"The request grew out of the success of two Belfast children who learned communication skills by the association method in Dublin, Republic of Ireland after methods used in Belfast proved ineffective," she said.

A British Broadcasting Corporation radio-telephone interview about the workshop and the method was arranged and brought a great deal of enquiries from all over the British Isles from teachers and parents of children with language-learning disorders.

Both Martin and DuBard used audio visual programs videotaped in the SCLD by USM's Teaching Learning Resources Center, featuring the association method in their courses.

The method, a multi-sensory approach for teaching children with complex learning-communication problems, has been taught previously by DuBard in Dublin and in Canada.

DuBard's course in Belfast made use of an additional tape on the assessment of non-verbal children. Both tapes were of the work done by teachers and children in the SCLD, a United Way Agency and one of the clinical services of the Department of Speech and Hearing Sciences Dr. Robert C. Thomas chairman.

Forest industry reports record tree planting

The South's forest industry planted a record 629,370,862 pine and hardwood trees during the 1976-79 planting season, but that's not enough to meet the double-demand for wood and paper products projected for the year 2020, says Southern Forest Institute.

"Consumers should be concerned with productivity on independent lands owned by farmers, factory workers, businessmen and housewives—some two-million individuals owning 73 percent of the 200 million acres of commercial forestland in the South," says Don Smith, SFI's director of forest resources.

He adds, "Tree-planting efforts on the 18 percent owned by industry is 'intensive' forest management. On the other hand, private, non-industrial lands—too often not managed—are producing at only half their potential."

The U.S. Forest Service reports one-million acres of valuable pine forests lost each year because independent landowners don't regenerate harvested tracts.

Smith says, "Many landowners don't understand forest management. Some don't have the capital to invest in a long-term forestry investment. Many have other plans for their land. Too many, however, aren't aware of available assistance."

For example, industry distributed 92,227,229 pine seedlings and 54,900 hardwood seedlings to landowners during the last planting season. State nurseries sold another 200-million seedlings—shortage on the horizon. State nurseries aren't receiving adequate funds to expand. Forest companies are rapidly establishing new nurseries in the South, but it takes time to get them into full production. Last year 372,237 pine and hardwood seedlings were grown in industry nurseries.

SFI encourages landowners to order seedlings early and to consider other methods for regenerating their lands—for example, under professional guidance, direct seeding a harvested site in much the same way you sow other agricultural crops. Industry direct seeded 52,534 acres last year.

Another method is to leave a few trees standing in a harvested site to allow for "natural" tree regeneration. Productivity can be increased by planting superior seedlings—trees that grow faster, straighter and taller than normal trees. During the '76-79 planting season, industry planted 286,238,348 "super-trees."

Smith concludes, "Forestry is agriculture in slow-motion. It can earn as much as 10-15 percent return on investment. It's also an investment in improved recreation, wildlife habitat, watershed protection and control of erosion."

SFI recommends landowners contact local forest companies, state forestry agencies, extension service offices, or private, consulting forestry firms for advice. They can make recommendations and help find financial assistance through government cost-share programs.

Hotline offered to Hurricane victims here

Gov. Cliff Finch and Federal Coordinating Officer William H. Mayer reports a toll-free disaster hot line is available to Mississippi residents seeking information about disaster assistance on damages suffered in Hurricane Frederic.

The number is 1-800-222-6002. "Persons should go to the disaster assistance centers first for detailed information about programs and to apply for assistance from state, federal and volunteer agencies," the officials said.

"If persons want to know the location of the disaster assistance center nearest them, obtain additional information after visiting a center, they should call the toll free disaster hot line," they added.

Westside Community Center in Gulfport on U.S.-90 is open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. everyday until all people can be seen and assisted, Mayer emphasized.

He is a member of Battalion Landing Team One Slant Eight (BLT 1-8), based at Camp Lejeune, N.C. His unit is currently deployed to the Mediterranean Sea with the U.S.

6th Fleet. Training during the week-long exercise included beach and helicopter assaults. The purpose of the exercise was to reinforce a U.S. facility facing an attack by a hypothetical revolutionary force. Following the training, Marines had the opportunity to visit ports in Greece, Italy and Spain. A 1976 graduate of Bay Senior High School, Ainsworth joined the Marine Corps in July 1976.

Runaway problem increases

Father who searched four years for son recommends counseling for runaways, parents

By RICH ADAMS

Keith Scott of Corpus Christi, Texas, knows the feelings of despair, guilt, and loneliness experienced by teenage runaways. The 50-year-old contractor also knows the guilt, fear and hopelessness that parents of runaways feel.

Scott had a four-year education, which is still continuing, on the subject of runaway teenagers.

Scott's son, Richard (Rick) ran away from his Texas home in February of 1973, just shy of his sixteenth birthday.

Scott spent thousands of dollars and a total of 47.5 months traveling coast-to-coast in search of his son, finally finding him working as a runaway counselor in Clearwater, Florida in February of 1977.

The Texan contractor has since written a book about the experience entitled "A Father's Search."

But Scott said here Monday the fact that he has written a book is not important, but rather what the book will offer to runaways and their parents.

Scott said the runaway population is increasing steadily, and not enough facilities to assist the young runaway are being established.

But more important, Scott contends, is the fact that youngsters who flee homes and are returned to their parents are not receiving proper counseling.

"The most extremely important part is no matter how intelligent the parents think they are - they are not equipped to handle the situation without counseling from a qualified psychologist or counselor," Scott said during a brief stay in Bay St. Louis while on his way to Pascagoula and Mobile to begin reconstruction of the hurricane-stricken areas there.

"When I found my son, we were told by a minister to receive outside counseling. I refused to go to counseling, and a lot of damage was done because of my refusal," he continued.

"My reaction to the thought of professional counseling was that as educated a man like myself had found my son, and this minister said to get separate counselors for both of us, probably 24- or 25-year-old men," the author explained.

"I thought a young man would not understand what I was going through," he added. "I was totally naive about the entire matter," he explained.

Now while traveling across the country counseling run-

"So many youngsters have run away from home and gone back, and the parents promise to change. Things will go smooth for a few days, but then the parents will be back to the same pattern as before the teenager left within a week," he added.

Scott feels a young runaway, if not found within four days, will possibly become emotionally scarred for life by the lifestyle he will be forced to adapt to on the streets of a large city.

"For example, the youngster will catch a bus or a train to New York," Scott explained.

"Once on the street, pimps and procurers will see 'runaway' written all over the youngster's face. These pimps are really brilliant people," he continued.

"They will take the youngster totally under their wing and offer him protection. The child will immediately identify with that person as a protector," Scott added.

Scott related horror stories of young teenagers being weaned on drugs and becoming dependent upon them, and then being sexually exploited by the powerful pimps.

"I don't believe anyone has the right to force their sexual preferences upon a child between the ages of 13-to-15 years," Scott continued.

"The youngster will be put onto the street under the influence of a drug, to which the youth has become physiologically dependent," he explained.

"The drug scene will naturally be encountered by a teen in that situation, and he or she will do anything to keep that high which is felt on the drugs," Scott added.

"This sexual exploitation will mark the youngster permanently - he will remember the incident for the rest of his life," he said.

Scott also feels present facilities established to house runaways, as well as laws pertaining to treatment of the youngsters, should be looked into.

"Facilities have been established, but most are not adequate to facilitate the youngster," Scott said.

"In Clearwater, Florida, the local Council of Churches has established a row of five houses for the purpose of rehabilitation. One is for alcoholics, another for drug addicts, and the remaining three are to house transients and destitutes," he explained.

"The homes contain many three-man apartments, each with a sink, shower, refrigerator and bathtub. The residents look for work, and must bring back three receipts from job applications and interviews or they will be asked to leave," he continued.

"If the youngsters find employment, they pay $7 a week for their room. I like that set up. I cannot see forcing a religion or belief on others," Scott said.

"The churches should run the house because they should be operated by persons above reproach. But a particular religion should not be forced on the youngster," he added.

Scott said a special law enforcement team of psychologist, a plain-clothes policeman with qualifications in runaway counseling, and a secretary has been established in New York City to deal with the enormous runaway population there.

"The unit is operated under the direction of the New York Port Authority, and is the greatest group of experts in law enforcement of this kind," according to Scott.

"The unit believes that if the child is not found within a four-day period, emotional damage will be irreparable," Scott said.

He also feels the laws pertaining to treatment and return of the young runaways are wrong.

"You don't want to grab the child and say 'Come with me,' because that youngster will be scared," Scott said.

"I like the police, but they are tied by laws which say what they must do in situations dealing with runaways," he continued.

"The special unit in New York is trained to investigate the parents and homes of the runaway to see if he can be returned to that home without repercussions. If the home is not suitable, the youngster will be placed in a foster home or the like," he explained.

Scott explained that the runaway usually wants to return to his parents, but feelings of guilt and shame for running away along with the fear of being rejected if he should return keep him from going back.

"My son wanted to come home, but he was not aware that we wanted him," Scott related.

"This is important - the youngster feels he has shamed his parents, and is fearful of rejection. The longer he is gone, the stronger the guilt becomes, and the harder it is for him to return," he continued.

"The response to a toll-free number has been phenomenal in many communities in Texas," Scott said, referring to a telephone number which a youngster can call to relay a message to parents and tell them he is alright.

Scott said he appears on local and national television talk shows during Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays seasons, because the runaway is more likely to call his parents during those periods.

"Tell your son or daughter that if you had a choice to pick a child, you would have still picked him or her," Scott said.

"Parents still should kiss their children at the ages of 13 to 16 because they need the reassurance that they are loved. The bumper sticker which says 'Have you hugged your son today?' says it all," he added.

After finding his son, Scott bought an old milk truck, converted it to sleep six, added a stereo and kitchen, and he and his son hit the highways in search of runaways in need of a little love and assistance.

When asked if he was successful during a television interview, Scott's son said "If I keep one youngster from running away, I am successful. If I prevent more than one from running away, that is a bonus."

Scott's book ends on the day he found his son and took him back to their Corpus Christi home, but the end of Scott's personal relationship with his son is not a happy ending.

Scott admitted Monday his son left him six months after their reunion. Scott has not heard from him since.

"Rick said he did not feel the response from the public was strong enough, and he disappeared in October of 1977," Scott said.

"I am not looking for him this time. Our biggest problem was that we did not seek professional help when we were told to," he continued.

"My ultimate dream now is to buy a large recreational van, equip it with sleeping room, and assist runaways all I can," he added.

Scott still does travel by car to largely populated areas to help youngsters, despite a lack of funding other than from his own pocket.

He said he works on a large construction or painting job for a few months, and then gets the urge "I hate the word obsession," he explains - to drive his car, picking up hitchhikers who may be runaways he can help.

"I never know who I am picking up, but I think that if I do not do it, perhaps the guy driving behind me will, and I do not know what kind of person he is," Scott said.

"I just save my money while I work, and then I feel I have to go help these youngsters," he added.

*The EPA study, from which column one is derived, evaluated only the 48 states plus the District of Columbia. The NWF survey represented the 50 states plus the District of Columbia and the three territories (Guam, the Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico). Only the 51 states common to both studies are included.

Mississippi near last in toxic waste safety

A toxic disaster could "happen tomorrow almost anywhere in the United States," according to a study conducted by the National Wildlife Federation. This conclusion is based on a survey in which environmental officials of all 50 states and the District of Columbia participated.

An analysis of the survey, which asked detailed questions about each state's toxic substances program, reveals that the ten jurisdictions which best safeguard their citizens "in light of the severity of their hazardous waste problems" are: Vermont, Oregon, Wyoming, Delaware, Maryland, Washington, the District of Columbia, North Dakota, Montana, and Connecticut.

The ten states whose toxic substances programs do the poorest job of protecting their citizens are: Georgia, Missouri, West Virginia, Kentucky, Michigan, Mississippi, Massachusetts, Indiana, Illinois, and Arizona.

According to Kenneth Kamlet, an NWF attorney and manager of its Toxic Substances Project, each state was initially given a ranking based on its response to the NWF survey questionnaire.

"That ranking doesn't adequately reflect how good a state's toxic waste program is, however, until we compare it to the level of hazardous waste generated in that state," explained Kamlet.

NWF then studied hazardous waste generation estimates for each state provided by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and developed a "need-response index" which ranks each state as to how well it has responded to needs based on the amount of hazardous waste it generates.

The EPA funded the NWF study. So although California, for example, placed first in the initial NWF rankings, it is the fourth highest hazardous waste-generating state. As a result, it ranks only 2nd in the need-response index.

The survey found wide variations in the adequacy of the programs of the ten biggest hazardous waste-generating states - New Jersey, Ohio, Illinois, California, Pennsylvania, Texas, New York, Michigan, Tennessee, and Indiana.

These states are responsible for 60 percent of all the hazardous waste produced in the U.S., the survey notes.

The EPA estimates that American industry generates 35 million tons of hazardous wastes - acids, toxic chemicals, corrosive metals, and other dangerous substances - annually. It has also esti-ated that 51,000 dumping sites in the U.S. contain some hazardous wastes.

Among the "big ten" hazardous waste generators, NWF found that only one state, Tennessee, ranked in the top 20 in the need-response index.

Seven of the big ten - New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Illinois, Indiana, and Michigan - ranked within the bottom 20 in meeting their states' needs.

The survey questionnaire was mailed in January, 1979, and all questionnaires were returned by May.

"A number of states have upgraded their laws and regulations since the NWF survey was done," Kamlet noted. "Some states would fare better if reevaluated today, but most programs still need drastic improvements."

What were some of the most serious problems uncovered in the survey? Less than a quarter of the states regulate hazardous waste landfills either by segregating waste from non-toxic wastes, or by specifying where the hazardous waste landfills should be located.

Nearly half the states require no assessment of the toxic chemical content of wastes proposed for landfills, and less than a quarter of the states require content labels on disposed hazardous waste containers.

"The states," says the study. The control of abandoned dumps - such as the Love Canal site in New York state - is also poor in the jurisdictions surveyed. Without adequate controls - which most states are lacking - on the future uses of such land, these abandoned dumps can serve as " ticking time bombs ready to explode into serious problems," concludes the study.

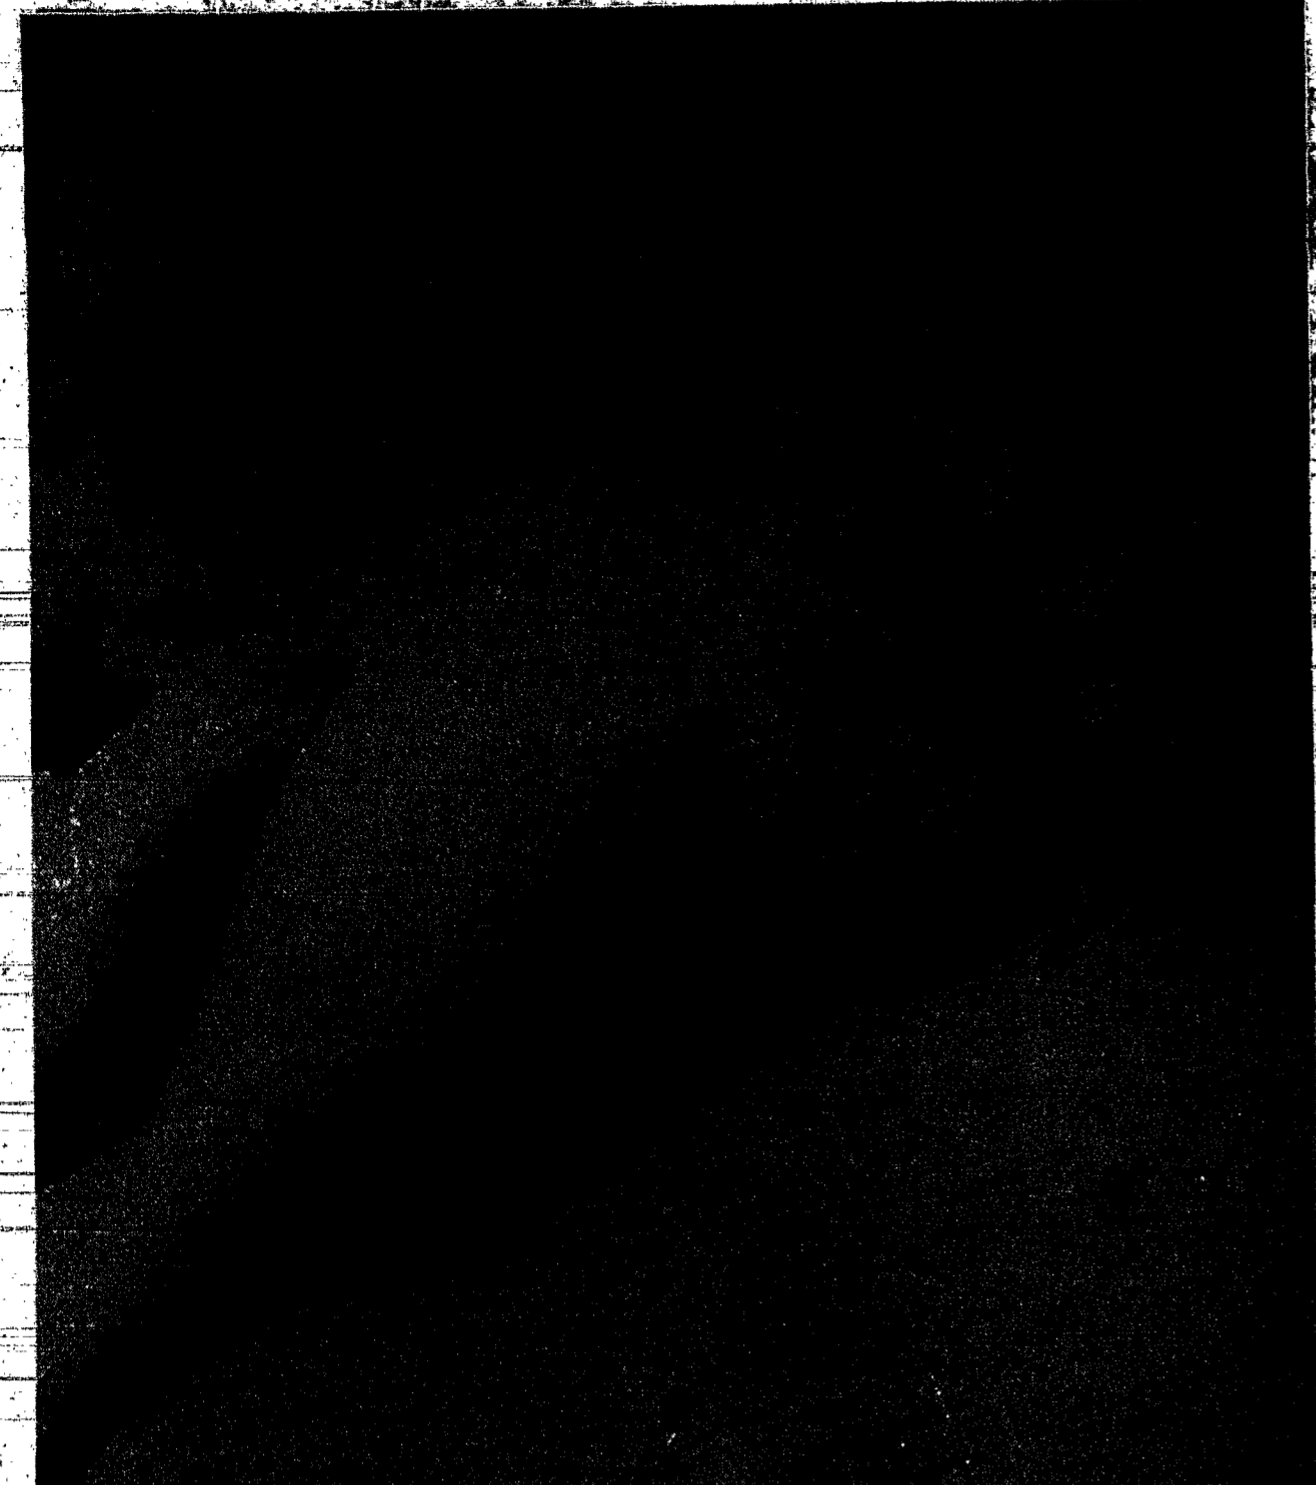

Other areas covered in the survey include the handling of toxic waste emergencies, pesticide disposal, oil recycling, water pollution prevention, and surface and ground water monitoring and protection.

The study, which also covered Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, includes results and detailed analysis of responses to each question asked in the survey.

"Toxic Substances Programs in the U.S. States and Territories - How Well Do They Work?" Will be published in booklet form in late September and is available free for the first copy, and 60 cents for each additional copy.

HANCOCK ENTRANTS WIN - Grand prize winners in the fourth annual Sand Sculpture Contest sponsored Saturday by Gulf Publishing Company of Gulfport, publishers of The Sun and The Daily Herald, are Franya and her brother Vic Frankiewicz, left, of Bay St. Louis; Kristy Murray of Pass Christian and Mary Ann Skladzien of Waveland, kneeling center; and Chris Hall of Waveland, right. The group, who had practiced the previous weekend on the Waveland beach for the main event on the beach near Edgewater Mall, was awarded $1,000 cash and a trophy for their winning effort. The trophy is on display at Hall's Little Caesar Restaurant in Waveland. Judges noted the modernistic, amorphic 'fat man and fat woman' figures resembled the work of famous sculptor Henry Morris, according to designer Franya Frankiewicz. ## New Orleans Museum displays Haitian art

HAITIAN ART, an exhibition of a unique, indigenous art that has flourished in Haiti since the end of World War II, will be held at the New Orleans Museum of Art in City Park September 15 through October 20.

The exhibition consists of 150 paintings and sculptures that reflect the whole kaleidoscope of Haitian life and spirit.

The works are installed in three thematic sections: history, religion, and everyday life. Among the artists represented are Wilson Bigaud, Rigaud Benoit, Prete Daffaut, Hector Hyppolite, and Jasmin Joseph.

Organized by Ute Stebich under the auspices of The Brooklyn Museum, the exhibition is made possible with the aid of grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Art in Haiti thrived after

Dewitt Peters, an American who came to Haiti in 1943, established the Centre d'Art in Port-au-Prince. His encouragement of self-taught artists brought to the surface a surprising amount of talent from a diverse group: an illiterate peasant, an airplane mechanic, an ex-bookkeeper, a rich young man, a stevedore, a boyish shipwright, a senator's son, a truck driver, a houseboy, an itinerant housepainter, and a voodoo priest.

This generation of artists depicts the events and heroes of Haitian history, draws upon religious experiences, and documents the events of daily life in Haiti.

Following Columbus' arrival in 1492, the Spanish ruled Haiti and its Ciboney and Arawak Indians. The native population diminished under the conquerors' demand for gold, and in 1818 the work force was replenished with African slaves.

A 1897 treaty with Spain gave

France possession of Haiti, and the slave population continued to grow.

Haitians who came from Africa-as-slaves-were-from many parts of that continent, and each brought with him his own culture and religion. Out of the need to live with one another, they developed a common language-Creole-and a common religion-Voodoo.

A black uprising in 1791 began a struggle that ended in 1804 with the establishment of the first independent black republic. Not a single history painting is known that refers to events prior to the uprising of 1791.

The only surviving paintings of historical monuments are those by Numa Desroches, one of which is included in the exhibition. A few untrained artists have painted historical subjects since the opening of the Centre d'Art in the 1940s, interpreting Haiti's past.

The paintings and sculptures in the religion section of the exhibition reveal the strong impact Voodoo and Christianity have on the lives of Haitians.

The island's exotic flora and fauna, the intimacies of Haitians family life, the affection and care between young and old, and important public events are depicted with vivid color and imagination.

Complementing the exhibition is a number of videotapes and a collection of Haitian folk songs. The videotapes, produced by independent producer Gail Pelletier, will include a general introduction to Haiti, interviews with Haitian artists, and a feature on the Haitian carnival.

These videotapes will be shown in the museum's auditorium, which is located in the same building as the art gallery.

The museum is located at 1200 Poydras Street, New Orleans, Louisiana 70112. Hours of operation are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekends. Admission is $2.00 for adults, $1.00 for children, and $0.50 for seniors. Free admission for children under 10 and seniors over 65.

Man makes himself and will receive only what he pays for

WE GET WHAT WE DESERVE

Ralph Waldo Emerson, famous American author, wrote an essay on Compensation over 100 years ago. I heard a radio review recently of this essay that made me want to go back and reread it.

With so many things to read today, and with the great volume of current publications of all kinds, I am afraid that we, too much, overlook the great literature of the past.

A great truth, as much true today as when it was first written, is emphasized in this essay by Ralph Waldo Emerson.

To toll down the meaning of this essay into just a few words: It teaches us that we get what we deserve - or to express it another way - We get what we pay for.

Emerson teaches in this essay that for every action there is a reaction, or resulting action; that man, by his actions, is the maker of himself.

If he is studious and studies with a purpose in view, he becomes educated. Emerson said, "If you see smoke, there must be fire. If you see a hand or an arm, you know there is a body to which it belongs. Punishment is the fruit of crime; cause and effect, means and ends, seed and fruit, cannot be separated. For the effect results from the cause, just as the fruit comes from the seed."

If you plant corn, you get corn, not potatoes or something else.

If a man wants to become an engineer he must pay the price required in study and work before he can qualify. He must study and work and practice for years before he can become qualified to build a great bridge or construct a great building.

"He can no more get this knowledge and know-how without doing the work required than you can have an inside without having an outside, or a light without shadow. No one else can learn for you, anymore than anyone else can eat for you, or breathe for you.

Life is made up of inevitable conditions which no one can dodge. In nature-in life, nothing can be given, all things are sold. The price for a young man to become a skilled doctor is years and years of hard work.

The law is: Pay the price and take what you want. Measure for measure; give, and it shall be given unto you. What will you have? The law says: Pay for it and take it. If a young man wants to become a dentist, he pays the price in work and study.

According to Emerson's Essay on Compensation, you will be paid exactly for what you have done, no more, no less.

If you do evil, you are paid off in evil. Curses always recoil on the head of him who utters them. If you put a chain around the neck of a slave, the other end fastens itself around your own neck. It is thus written because it is thus life.

I repeat, these thoughts are from Emerson's Essay on Compensation.

"A man cannot speak without judging himself. With his will, or against his will, he draws his portrait to the eye of his companions by every word he utters."

Every opinion you utter reacts on you. You cannot do wrong without suffering wrong yourself. No man can mistreat another without hurting himself more.

Mistreat men and you suffer as well as they. If you leave your heart, you shall lose your own. Mistreat your fellow man and you shall suffer more than he.

Experienced men of the world know well that it is best to pay in full as they go along, and that a man often pays much more by trying to get by without paying something he owes.

The story is told of a man who left a community where he had lived a long time. In his new home he wanted to open an account to buy something that he badly needed, and which would help him greatly.

Before making the sale, the merchant sent back to his home town to find out about him. The report showed that he had left leaving a number of unpaid accounts.

He failed to get this thing he so badly wanted because of his negligence in paying small bills. Always pay; for, first or last, you must pay your entire debt. Persons and events may stand, for a time, between you and justice, but is only a postponement. You and I must, at last, pay all our debts.

"Benefit is the end of nature." But for every benefit which you receive, a tax is levied. He who is great confers the most benefits. He who is low and base - and that is the only base thing in the universe - to receive favors, and render none.

The benefit we receive must be rendered again, line for line, deed for deed, cent for cent, to somebody. Beware of too much good staying in your own hand. It pays you to pay it away quickly in some sort.

Labor is watched over by the same pitiless laws. Experienced men who work much labor, say that the cheapest labor costs the most. The laborer who does not try, cheats only himself - he will find his wages reduced, and he will find it much harder to get a job.

It is best to pay more - much more - to a skillful worker and thus assure yourself of a job well done. In labor, as in life, there can be no cheating. The thief steals from himself. The swindler swindles himself.

The league between virtue and nature is always hostile to vice and evil doing. Not only man-made laws, but the laws of nature persecute and whip the traitor and the criminal. The criminal finds that things are arranged for truth and benefit, and that there is no place in the whole world to hide a rogue.

Commit a crime, and it seems as if a coat of snow fell on the ground which will reveal the track of everything that goes over it. You cannot recall the spoken word. You cannot wipe out the foot track, you cannot draw up the ladder so as to leave no clue.

Some circumstance always exposes the man who commits a crime or an indiscretion. When a man does things that he ought not to do, he had just about as well publish it in the paper, and announce it over the radio, for everyone will soon know all about it anyway.

On the other hand, as Emerson says, "The law holds with equal sureness for all right action." Love and you shall be loved. "All love is mathematically just. The good are befriended even by weakness and defect. As no man had ever a point of pride that was not injurious to him, so, no man had ever a defect that was not somewhere made useful to him. The deer, in the fable, admired his horns and blamed his feet, but when the hunter came, his feet saved him, and afterwards, caught in a thicket, his horns which he so admired, destroyed him.

Man's life is a progress and not a station. You must move onward day by day to the end of your life. Even if you wanted to, you cannot stand still - time will not let you.

You are progressing daily to the end.

In the journey of life you can have what you are willing to pay for - you will not get anything you do not pay for. If a young lady wants to become an accomplished musician, she can pay the price and become one. You ask, what is the price? The price is made up of years and years of study, practice and hard work.

A young man wants to be a master farmer, and the price here, too, is high and is made up of years of study and work to learn how to make a farm produce well.

A young woman wants to be a registered nurse; she knows that she will have to pay the price as she goes to an accredited hospital and learns how to do all the work in a hospital, and she studies certain books over a period of years. When she has paid the price she comes out to practice her profession.

A young person wants to become a teacher; there is a stipulated course of study over a period of years that he must take in order to qualify as a teacher. He pays the price in full and becomes a teacher.

Action, and reaction, we meet in every part of nature; in darkness and light; in heat and cold; in man and woman; odd and even; in and out; up and down; yes and nay.

In your every day-work you do certain things and get certain results. If you do right things, you get right results.

If you do wrong things, you get wrong results.

You plant the tree to get, in later years, the fruit. Just as surely, the thoughts you think form your character, for good or for bad. Man, through his actions and his thinking, is truly the maker of himself.

I repeat again: Much of the thought in what I have said today is from the Essay on Compensation by Ralph Waldo Emerson.

I believe that the most important thing that can be taught to any child is to make him realize that he is the maker of himself, through his own thoughts and actions; that a person gets what he deserves - what he is willing to pay for.

There are many gems of literature, such as Emerson's Essays, that need to be brought to the attention of the people of this generation.

Chevron rushes repairs of Pascagoula refinery

Chevron U.S.A. said today that it is moving ahead as rapidly as possible to put its Pascagoula, Mississippi, refinery back into operation following a shutdown forced by Hurricane Frederic.

Initial inspections indicated that the refinery, located on the Mississippi Gulf Coast, suffered only moderate damage after the hurricane lashed the area with 130-mile-per-hour winds late Wednesday evening, Chevron reported.

Insulation was blown off refinery tanks, cooling towers were damaged, and power lines blown down, Chevron said. However, there were no injuries to personnel or major damage to plant structures or refinery buildings. There also were no fires or product spills, the company said.

The refinery shutdown was completed by 3 p.m. Wednesday in anticipation of the hurricane's arrival. This precaution was taken to minimize chances of possible exposures to fires and product spillage.

Until damage assessments are completed, Chevron said, it cannot determine how long it will take to resume normal operations.

"Although full operation is not likely for several weeks, we are moving as rapidly as possible to phase crucial refining facilities back into service so that partial operation of the refinery can be accomplished as soon as possible," a Chevron spokesman said.

In the meantime, Chevron said it has resumed product deliveries from its marketing terminals in the area, drawing on products from inventory.

The company also said it will take steps to acquire petroleum products from other areas to augment supplies and minimize the impact of the shutdown on the company's customers in the Southeastern states.

Chevron's Pascagoula refinery, which was processing approximately 260,000 barrels of crude daily prior to the shutdown, is an important supply source for the Southeastern U.S.

As in earlier disasters, Chevron will extend special credit terms to hurricane victims who need extra time to pay their bills.

South Central Bell reacts to hurricane stricken areas

Public telephones are installed outside the telephone Central offices in Pascagoula and Moss Point, hard hit by hurricane Frederic, for use as needed both for local calling and long distances. The specially designated long distance phones are primarily for credit card, third number and collect calls.

Materials and supplies needed are on hand from Western Electric distribution centers, which serve South Central Bell. Western Electric maintains emergency inventory to meet emergency situations such as this.

Franklin Kyle, District

Manager for South central Bell said, "In addition, standardization of equipment, tools, training and work procedures throughout the Bell System result in quick response to disasters. During times of emergency, we can quickly marshal installation and repair people as needed from throughout the Bell System."

Crews were out at work as soon as it was safe for them to enter stricken areas.

The most pressing problem of the Telephone Company continues to face is an overload on central offices resulting from the sheer number of long distance and local calls being placed.

Call volume reports indicate that the telephone traffic is running two and one half times the normal volume on the Gulf Coast. Meridian, Laurel, and other state operator locations also report substantial increases.

Operators from Jackson and the northern section of Mississippi are being temporarily relocated to the hurricane affected areas to cope with this increase in calls.

Abnormally high calling volume usually result in delayed dial tone and slow operator answers. "Again, we are requesting our customers to help us by restricting their calling only to those calls that are necessary and essential," Kyle said.

"With our customers' help we can help reduce these delay conditions."

Customers are also being urged to dial direct long distance calls whenever possible.

"In an overload situation like the one we are experiencing, our operators have no better access to long distance circuits than do individual customers even though we have every available operator on the job," Kyle said.

"We also know that in the emergency situation there may be people who might need help. We will make every effort to get them up the desired number and will relieve our operators as quickly as possible."

Hancock North Central

Hawcs

By RICH ADAMS
Sports Editor

The Hancock North Central Hawks are practicing furiously for a county rivalry Friday against the Bay High Tigers, but face possible injury problems which could cut deeply into their offensive running attack.

Hancock North Central Head Coach Irvin Favre said this week that his two star running-backs, Lloyd Henry and Willy Santiago, are injured and are questionable starters in the contest against Bay High.

Running Back George Moore, who scored one touchdown and a two-point conversion against the Forrest County Aggies last week, is out for the game and perhaps the season with a knee injury sustained in that game.

Henry and Santiago both received shoulder injuries which could force them to sit out the game, Favre said.

"Right now we just don't know if they will play. They are not practicing, and we are applying heat to their bruised shoulders," Favre said.

Henry and Santiago were instrumental in defeating the Forrest eleven, both on offense and as defensive pass defenders.

Henry clambered for 173 yards in the match against the Aggies, and his not playing would effect the Hawks, who have little depth in the backfield.

Bay High's running quarterback, Chuck Benigno, will pose a ground threat to the Hawk defense, and Favre said containment of Benigno is necessary for an HNC victory.

"We have to contain Benigno. If we don't, we will lose the game," Favre said.

"Bay High has a good running game, and Benigno can handle the offense well. The Tigers also have a fine defense," he continued.

"If Santiago and Henry come back, we will be alright. Those two can play both ways," he added.

Larry Peterson, the 230-pound senior fullback, will be back in action against the Tigers after sitting out most of the last two games with a hairline fracture of the leg.

"I hope by game time that we will be at full strength," Favre said.

Favre said he hopes the home team advantage will give his team an edge, but added since Friday is Fair Day and most team members will not be at school, the pre-game dinner and activities will not be conducted.

Favre also said he believes the size of the lines on both teams will be near equal, but added the two extra games the Hawks have played may win this match for them.

The Hawks have played three games this season, while Bay High has participated in only one, their game against East Central last Friday being cancelled.

St. Stanislaus

Rock-A-Chaws

By RICH ADAMS
Sports Writer

The St. Stanislaus Rock-A-Chaws, ready for action following their opening victory over Pearl River Central last week, face a rival St. John squad Friday in Gulfport.

SSC Head Coach Barry Jones said Monday the game, an annual rivalry between the two Catholic schools, promises to be a tough contest for his Rocks.

St. John has a real fine ball club, the best they have put together in years," Jones said.

"They defeated Long Beach 13-7 last game, and it was a solid victory, no accident. Several of his people played an outstanding defensive game," he continued.

"St. John has perhaps the best nose guard playing this year, Ed Clark. He is 6'-2" and weighs 207 pounds. He is the best they have had in years," he added.

St. John is well rounded, but they do not have much depth. It will be a tough game," Jones said.

The Rock skipper said Terry Bilbo, a defensive end for the SSC squad, sustained a bruised knee during the game against Pearl River Central, and is a questionable starter.

"We won't know until late Thursday afternoon if he will play. He is a questionable starter," Jones said.

Jones conceded his team made a lot of mistakes during the victory over PRC, and said he is working for improvement.

"It took a while to get the offense rolling," Jones said.

"We made a few defensive mistakes, but all-in-all the defense played very aggressively. I was pleased with the victory, but we have to make many improvements," he added.

Jones cited his two veteran running backs, Keith Pfister and Scott Senner, for their running abilities displayed during the game last week.

"Senner rushed for 127 yards and three touchdowns, and Pfister would have had right at 200 yards had not two of his runs been called back," Jones said.

"I feel we have potential. We need more of an offensive assault and more good big plays before we are really good," he added.

Jones also cited Quarterback Gary Sotak for retaining his calmness during his first starting game this season.

"He passed six-for-ten for 60 yards with no interceptions. He did a very good job as a starter, and he got a lot of good action out of the offense," Jones said.

"I am looking forward to his improving," he added.

"We must try to eliminate our mistakes. We need a much better effort to beat this solid football team," he continued.

"This is a major ballgame to us. We must rise to the occasion and try to defeat this rival team," he added.

St. John Head Coach Mike Gavin said Monday he only has a complement of 20 men on his squad, and knows he will be outmanned by the Rock team.

"We're small in number and size, but these boys have a lot of courage and desire to win," Gavin said.

Gavin cited Mark Villarreal, star running back for the St. John eleven, as "a small runner, but powerful and physical."

Gavin is wary of the Rock's running and kicking game and is hoping to contain Senner.

"Senner is big and hard to bring down," Gavin said.

"We will have to contain him if we want to stop the team," he continued.

"The kicking game is excellent, as Senner can really punt the ball. Juan Betanzos has a good kick, also," he added.

"This will be a physical game, and I hope we don't have too many hurt," Gavin said.

The game begins at 7:30 p.m. at St. John's stadium in Gulfport.

TIGERS

By RICH ADAMS
Sports Editor

Bay High faces Hancock North Central Friday night at Hawk Stadium, and first year Tiger Head Coach James (Snuffy) Smith is trying to install a "where there is a will, there is a way" attitude in his players.

The will, Smith said, is the hardest part. But despite the will to win, injuries may stop the Tigers from defeating the Hawks.

"Minor injuries incurred during practice have caused some complications, but I am not sure how much this will effect us," Smith said.

"The injuries may cause complications, and may possibly cause problems at the game Friday," he added.

Smith would not elaborate on who was injured or how extensive the injuries are, and he would not count anyone out for any length of time.

"It is too early to say how many problems these injuries will cause," Smith said.

Smith said his Tigers will have to work hard to control the Hawk running game, and is wary of the wishbone offense instituted by the Hawks.

"Our defense will attack and pressure the HNC offense," Smith said.

"We will try to stop the Hawks at the line of scrimmage. If they get beyond that point, they may break away," he continued.

"I guess you could say we are using a penetration defense against HNC," he added.

Smith said the wishbone gives the Hawks the option of using "finesse" plays of "power-drive" plays.

"The wishbone is easy to adjust to and I feel we can stop the offense," Smith said.

Pass Christian

Pirates

By RICH ADAMS
Sports Editor

Scabbards and tomahawks will clash Friday night as the Pass Christian Pirates meet the d'Iberville Warriors in a game which promises to be a physical confrontation of two perennial powerhouses.

Pass Christian is recovering from a surprising loss to the Vancleave Bulldogs two weeks ago, while the smaller-than-last-year Warriors are whooping it up on the warpath after one win this year.

Pass Christian Head Coach Bob Lumpkin said Monday his team has to overcome defensive problems and gain control over the opposing offense in order to return to the winning trail this year.

"We did not play good in the first half against Vancleave, but came back an improved team in the final half," Lumpkin said Monday.

"We will have to contain the Warrior running game, and we will have to stop John Evans," he added.

Evans is the Pascagoula River Conference's leading scorer with four touchdowns, scored against East Central in a 41-0 shutout of that team two weeks ago.

"We couldn't gain control of the ball in the game against Vancleave. We snapped the ball 25 times during the game compared to 62 times for them," Lumpkin said.

"We came back in the second half and had a chance to win, but time ran out on us," he added.

Lumpkin said the match Friday promises to be a hard hitting physical match.

"One starter, John Pat Swanner, is out with a bruised thigh. He is undergoing therapy, but it is doubtful he will start this week," Lumpkin said.

"Our strength is in our running game. We may have to throw more against d'Iberville in order to establish a ground game, but I hope we can work it out," he continued.

"We hope to have recovered from the loss against Vancleave by Friday," he added.

d'Iberville Head Coach Buddy Singleton said Monday his team is smaller than last year, but added all are strong players.

Singleton said his squad has not practiced at full strength since before Hurricane Frederic hit that area, and still has yet to have a full practice.

"We had 22 out at practice Monday, and we have 44 team members," Singleton said.

The head coach admitted his team this year is not as big and strong as last year's monster-man squad, but added his team has the will to win and is strong.

"This is a rebuilding year. We do not even compare with last year's squad," Singleton said.

"I believe we have a competitive squad, though. We have greater strength in our running game than last year, and we have more control," he added.

"We have a fairly good offense, and the name of the game is control," he added.

"Pass has a front line running back in Gene Lang," Singleton continued.

"He has been a transfer from St. Stanislaus and has started playing football in his sophomore year. He is a good runner," he added.

Singleton said the game will be a hard hitting physical match, and will be a good game.

"All our games are close contests. The will to win is what counts," he added.

The game will be played in d'Iberville at 7:30 p.m.

SIDELINE SYNOPSIS

By Rich Adams
Sports Editor

The first of the county rivalries opens tomorrow night as the Hancock North Central Hawks (2-1) compete against the Bay High Tigers (1-0) in Hawk Stadium.

Bay High, under the direction of first-year skipper James (Smuffy) Smith, won their first game two weeks ago against a tough Stone County crew.

Their game against East Central last week was cancelled due to Hurricane Frederic, when the East Central squad could not muster enough players to meet the Tigers.

The week off may have diminished some of the Tiger confidence and momentum, but the 'Smuffy Smith believe in winning' campaign was not damaged by the storm or the missing game.

Bay High Quarterback Chuck Benigno, who rambled for more than 100 yards against Stone County, will lead the Tiger's predominantly running attack against the Hawks.

HNC may be in trouble if its running backs do not recover from injuries in time for the big contest.

Lloyd Henry, who rushed for 173 yards against Forrest County last week, and veteran running back Willy Santiago, another key figure on the Hawk running scene, were both injured during a match against the Aggies.

In addition, Fullback George Moore was injured and will probably sit out the remainder of the year.

With no real depth in the backfield, the remainder of the season may be a long one for Hancock if Henry and Santiago are out for any period of time.

But, as Smith revealed Wednesday, some of his players have suffered injuries, although he failed to go into detail as to whom or how serious the injuries are.

If Hancock can muster its linebackers, I predict the Hawks will resoundingly defeat the Tigers Friday night.

The St. Stanislaus Rock-A-Chows take on St. John in another rivalry, and SSC first-year Head Coach Barry Jones is looking for a tough game.

The St. John squad consists of only 20 players, and does not have much depth.

However, the team has a fantastic nose guard by the name of Ed Clark and a notable running back, Mark Villarreal, which may cause minor problems for the well-built SSC eleven.

However, Scott Senner and Keith Pfister will be in fine form for the game, as will Quarterback Gary Sotak, and the Rocks should be in good shape for the annual Catholic School rivalry.

I think the Rocks will roll to victory over the St. John squad Friday night.

Pass Christian will vie for a victory after defeat by Vancleave two weeks ago, but the Pirates will have to work hard against a powerful, annually undefeated d'Iberville.

Pass' Gene Lang will offer a challenge to the Warrior defense, and the d'Iberville eleven have not met as a team since Hurricane Frederic damaged much of that area.

The Warriors defeated East Central 41-0 in their only game of the season so far, and will probably pose quite a problem for the Pirates.

I predict the d'Iberville gridiron forces will defeat the Pirates, but not by any large margin.

All games should be fantastic spectator events, and fans should enjoy the hard-hitting action at the stadiums.

because of Hurricane Frederic.

"This will be an exciting game. We have people on the team who believe we can win. We are not the powerhouse we used to be, but are winning on pride now," Favre said.

"I thought we put together a pretty good game last week," he added.

"The Hawks will be here," he emphasized.

The game will be played at HNC Stadium at 7:30 p.m.

HNC.....

The Tigers sat out last week as East Central could not muster a full complement due to Hurricane Frederic's damage of that school's surrounding area.

Smith said he does not feel the week off and only one game to their record, compared to HNC's three game experience, will be blamed if the Tigers should lose.

"It will be a big factor in the game, but we will not look for that as an excuse for losing," Smith said.

"The big question in my mind is if we can work up the will to defeat them," Smith continued.

"I am trying to develop the will in my players, and if we can get that will, we will find a way to penetrate Hancock and win," he added.

Smith said the game, an annual county rivalry, promises to be a physical, hard-hitting contest.

"I hope neither team sustains any injuries. In a game like this, we anticipate injuries, but we hope none are incurred. That is another factor in the game," Smith said.

"The game begins at 7:30 p.m. at Hancock North Central.

Gulfview defeats Charles B. Murphy

By RICH ADAMS

Gulfview Elementary's seventh- and eighth grade gridiron team defeated the Charles B. Murphy eleven in a contest here last week, winning their opening game of the season 30-12 following two undefeated years on the field.

Head Coach Curtis Thaxton said his team "looked good in spots," but added four of his Gulfview squads' touchdowns were called back due to infractions.

The Gulfview squad has gone undefeated in 22 games and was the victor in the Crab Bowl last year against Sauter.

The game was interrupted shortly before half time last week when the stadium experienced a power failure and the lights went out for one hour.

In the first quarter, Gulfview scored on a 12 yard scamper to paydirt by Richard Mayne.

Mayne is a returner from last year, when he played as a guard.

He also scored the two-point conversion to set the Gulfview squad in front, 8-0.

The quarter ended without change, but three touchdowns were called back because of penalties during the first stanza, Thaxton reported.

In the second period Geb Fricke let go with a 30 yard aerial to Jack Singleton for a score.

Lance Fricke scored a two-point conversion which set the Gulfview squad out in front 16-0.

Late in the first half Ladell Curry scampered 85 yards for Charles B. Murphy to put that team on the scoreboard.

The conversion attempt failed, and the Gulfview squad led 16-6.

In the third period, Mayne ran off-tackle for a 30 yard gain and another Gulfview score, and the PAT by Geb Fricke was good to add two more, making the score 24-6.

On the ensuing kickoff, the ball rolled to the one-yard line and Gulfview's Joey Everett pounced on the pigskin.

Thaxton put his second offense in, and a Karl Fricke to Lawrence Burton aerial was intercepted by a Charles B. Murphy player and run back 90 yards for the score.

The extra point attempt failed, and Gulfview still lead the game, 24-12.

Ran Davis took the ball in for Gulfview from 65 yards out, but a clipping penalty nullified the score.

Davis took the ball in from five yards out later that period to give the Gulfview eleven another score, and an unsuccessful PAT ended the game, 30-12.

Topo rushers in the game were Mayne, with 63 yards in seven carries, Davis with 57 yards in six romps downfield, and Geb Fricke, who gained 53 yards in nine runs.

Coach Thaxton said defensive standouts were Steve Shlyou, Donald Graham, Harold Strehle, and Wayne Freich.

"Those boys all did a stand-out job on defense," the coach said.

Welfare Department continues crackdown

The Mississippi Department of Public Welfare is continuing its statewide effort to crack down on fraud and abuse in the Food Stamp Program.

According to Robert Perry, Chief Investigator for the department, two Greenville residents pled guilty in the Greenville Justice Court on Friday, September 7, to receiving food stamps fraudulently.

Ms. Terry A. Bell was convicted of unlawfully receiving $576 worth of food stamps due to the fact that she did not report her employment to the county welfare office.

Ms. Rutile D. Howard was convicted of receiving $262.50 worth of food stamps illegally for failure to report her daughter's Supplemental Security Income (SSI) check.

Judge Wilma L. Lunceford found both Greenville residents guilty and sentenced them to a $100 fine each and restitution of $50 per month.

Divorce therapy offered in Gulfport

The Gulf Coast Mental Health Center in Gulfport is again conducting groups for divorce-divorcing persons.

The first series will begin Monday, September 24 and end on Monday, November 5.

The group is designed to provide emotional support as well as a sense of identity for the divorced person.

It will also help individuals learn how to deal with situations which are encountered by many newly single persons. Enrollment will be limited to fifteen individuals.

These individuals must be physically separated and consider divorce imminent or they must be already divorced.

Also, there can be no former spouses participating in the same group. The group will meet at the Gulf Coast Mental Health Center from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Pre-registration is required for participation.

For further information, contact Dr. Mary Anne O'Brien at the Gulf Coast Mental Health Center, 863-1132.

State tour planned

Choctaw Indian exhibit opens in Jackson Sunday

"Choctaw Craftsmen," an exhibit featuring white oak and swamp cane baskets, and native costumes made by four Choctaw Indians from the area around Philadelphia, Mississippi, will open at the State Historical Museum, Old Capitol Restoration, on September 23 and run through November 20.

The public is invited to watch the craftsmen demonstrate their art from 2:00-4:00 p.m. on Sunday, September 23, in the rotunda of the Old Capitol.

The State Historical Museum, administered by the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, the American Indian Program of Save the Children, and the Indian Arts and Crafts Board, in cooperation with the Choctaw Tribe, with the assistance of Linda Farve, director, organized the exhibit.

Under the direction of Patti C. Black, director of the State Historical Museum, Old Capitol Restoration, the exhibit will begin to tour Mississippi in 1980.

A representative sampling of baskets made by three Choctaw basket weavers will be on display during the exhibit. Proficient in all forms of the cane basketry art, Jeffrie D. Solomon, born and reared in the Conehatta community in Newton County, Mississippi, will display fourteen of her swamp cane baskets.

By observing her mother, Rosie Denson, a well known Choctaw swamp cane basket-weaver, she learned the art and has specialized in swamp cane double-weave baskets.

The exhibit will include Choctaw clothing creations made by Willie B. Willis.

Corps sets new permit criteria for Louisiana

New criteria for considering requests for permits for discharge of dredged or fill material in wetland areas are being placed into effect by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in areas of Western Louisiana.

Major General Robert C. Marshall, division engineer of the Corps' Lower Mississippi Valley Division, says the criteria will be applied by District Engineers in Vicksburg and in New Orleans.

The permits involved are required under Section 404 of the Clean Water Act of 1977 and by the 1972 amendments to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act.

General Marshall explains that the new criteria are required by an opinion issued by the Supreme Court in 1973.

In June of this year by U.S. District Court Judge Neilman S. Scott of the Western District of Louisiana in the case of the Avoyelles Sportsman's League, et al., versus Clifford L. Alexander, et al., wherein the court determined that "...clearing the land of trees and vegetation, which are parts of the waters of the United States under 33-C.F.R. § 323.2 (a) and (a) (agency regulations published pursuant to the Clean Water Act, constitutes the discharge of dredged material."

Such prohibited without a Section 404 permit issued by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

"Even though the decision is being appealed," General Marshall adds, "Judge Scott's order has not been stayed and we intend to follow it in the 42-parish area under the court's jurisdiction."

Parishes involved are Acadia, Allen, Avoyelles, Beauregard, Bienville, Bossier, Caddo, Calcasieu, Caldwell, Cameron, Catahoula, Claiborne, Concordia, DeSoto, East Carroll, Evangeline, Franklin, Grant, Iberia, Jackson, Jefferson Davis, Lafayette, LaSalle, Lincoln, Madison, Morehouse, Natchitoches, Ouachita, Rapides, Red River, Richland, Sabine, St. Landry, St. Martin, St. Mary, Tensas, Union, Vernon, Webster, West Carroll, and Winn.

Information on permit requirements is available from the Corps of Engineers District offices in New Orleans, Louisiana, and Vicksburg, Mississippi.

Disaster relief available to Frederic damage victims

A broad range of federal disaster relief programs are available to help people of the Gulf Coast begin to recover from the devastation of Hurricane Frederic, Congressman Trent Lott, R-Miss., announced today.

Lott said implementation of the relief programs would be triggered by a declaration from President Carter designating portions of the Coast as major disaster areas.

"That declaration will set in motion all of the disaster relief resources of the federal government," Lott said.

"One of the most important objectives is to inform the people of the assistance available to them, and to assist them in obtaining the aid to which they are entitled," the congressman said.

"I urge the people to apply for assistance as quickly as possible at Disaster Assistance Centers."

The relief programs may include the following:

- Temporary housing for homeless victims of "Frederic," until other housing resources are available. No rental is charged for up to 12 months;
- Grant for minimum essential repairs to owner-occupied residences so that families can return quickly to their damaged homes;
- Distribution of food coupons to eligible disaster victims;
- Temporary assistance with mortgage payments or rents for persons faced with the loss of their residence because of Hurricane Frederic-related financial hardship;
- Job placement assistance for persons left jobless by the hurricane;
- Disaster loans to individuals, businesses and farmers for refinancing, repair, rehabilitation or replacement of damaged real and personal property not fully covered by insurance;
- Assistance to farmers including payments of up to 80 percent of the cost of emergency conservation measures on farmland damaged by "Frederic";
- Individual and family grants of up to $5,000 to meet disaster-related necessary expenses;
- Crisis counseling and referrals to appropriate mental health agencies to relieve disaster-caused mental health problems;
- Legal services to low-income families;
- Consumer counseling and assistance in obtaining insurance benefits;
- Social Security assistance for obtaining appropriate benefits;
- Deductions from individual federal income tax returns of losses due to hurricane-related damage; and
- Veterans assistance, such as adjustment to VA-held home mortgages.

Glaucoma leading causes of blindness

In spite of readily available methods of treatment that can prevent its damage, glaucoma remains the nation's leading cause of irreversible blindness, according to the National Society to Prevent Blindness (NSPB).

NSPB reports that about two million Americans have glaucoma, half of whom do not know that they have it; one million have lost at least some of their vision to the disease and 6,000 new cases of glaucoma blindness are reported each year.

"The problem is," said Miss Eudora Welty, Sight-Saving Chairman of the Mississippi Society to Prevent Blindness, "that glaucoma sneaks up on you. In most cases it has no symptoms in its early stages, and its victims do not realize that anything is wrong until they have already lost some vision."

"Glaucoma can be detected," Miss Welty added, through a quick and painless test by an eye doctor. She urged people to have their eyes examined at least every two years, emphasizing that treatment can prevent loss of vision when the disease is found in time.

In glaucoma, she explained, the fluid that cleanses and lubricates the lens of the eye does not drain away properly. As it collects pressure builds to destroy nerves on the retina. Symptoms like blurred vision, difficulty adjusting to dark rooms, or the appearance of halos around light sometimes give a warning of glaucoma, but not until much damage is done. This damage cannot be corrected, but medical treatment can halt the progress of the disease.

"With what we know today," Miss Welty added, "there is no reason for people to continue going blind or to have impaired vision from glaucoma. An examination every two years is not much of an investment in time or money when you measure it against the devastating consequences of blindness."

Hospital Auxiliaries slate state meet in Jackson Wed.

The Mississippi Hospital Association Society for Auxiliaries will hold its fifth annual educational assembly at the Ramada Inn Coliseum, Jackson, on September 20.

The agenda will include discussions of the MHA program to encourage high-school students to seek careers as hospital nurses.

An MHA survey has shown that there are more than 1,000 registered-nurse openings in Mississippi which hospitals would fill if they had applicants.

"We will discuss the role hospital-auxiliary members may be able to play in helping hospitals attract young people to nursing careers," said Mrs. Beverly Gilbert, Jackson, president of the society, in announcing the agenda.

Mrs. Gilbert said members of the 40 hospital auxiliaries affiliated with the society have given "well over 100,000 hours this past year to volunteer duty in hospitals."

She listed the following speakers for the meeting:

Dr. Sarah E. Allison, vice-president for nursing services administration, Mississippi Methodist Hospital and Rehabilitation Center, in Jackson, will talk on "Problem Resolution Between Nursing Personnel and Volunteers."

Gil Magee, coordinator of community services for Mississippi School for the Deaf, will have as his subject "A Greater Dimension in Hospital Services: Treating the Handicapped Patient."

A panel on "Sharing Experiences in Revenue Producing Projects for Auxiliaries," with Mrs. Irene White, Southwest Mississippi Medical Center-McComb, presiding.

A panel on "Show and Tell of Current Auxiliary Projects," with Mrs. Gerry Toney, director of volunteer services, Golden Regional Triangle Medical Center, Columbus, presiding.

Harold Simpson, of Tylertown, chairman of the legislative committee of the MHA Society for Auxiliaries, will report on current federal and state legislative activities.

Michael Hughes, coordinator of poison-control services at the University of Mississippi Medical Center in Jackson, will talk on life-saving procedures in poison cases.
